Athletes' Olympic dreams lie shattered

Times News Services

Unless there is a dramatic change of events, a boycott by Canada of the Summer Olympics in Moscow will mean an end to many dreams.

The next chance at an Olympic medal will not come until 1984 in Los Angeles — provided the Games aren't shifted from that city as a result of the American-led boycott movement. For most of Canada's world-class athletes, that chance will be too late.

Years of training and disrupted education — just to flirt with glory — now appear to have been for nothing.

That feeling of loss and futility was uppermost in the minds of many Canadian athletes in reaction to the federal government's decision to back the boycott.

External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan told the Commons Tuesday Canada will boycott the Summer Olympics in Moscow to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

He said the government is convinced — following extensive consultations with western and Third World countries — there now exists enough international support to make the boycott effective.

The Canadian Olympic Association has been asked not to send athletes to the Games and those who decide to go will do so "without the moral or financial support of the government of Canada," MacGuigan said.

Canada, host of the 1976 Summer Games, joins close to 60 other countries which have indicated they will support the boycott movement launched by U.S. President Carter.

In related developments:

— In Bonn, the West German government, saying it "stands by its ally, the United States," recommended today that national Olympics officials boycott the Moscow summer games. Government spokesmen made it clear, however, it was up to sports officials to take the final decision on whether to or not to go to Moscow.

— In Washington, nineteen amateur athletes asked a federal court today to overturn the U.S. Olympic Committee's decision against sending a team to the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow. The athletes, all Olympic hopefuls, said the USOC violated their constitutional rights, an amateur sports law and its own constitution.

— The Canadian Association of University Athletic Directors says it supports the boycott by Canadian officials, athletes and spectators.

— The sole Canadian booking agent for the games, Sears Travel Service, said the fate of scheduled tours to Moscow will depend on a weekend decision by the Canadian Olympic Association. The company's policy, a spokesman said, is to give full refunds, less $100, if the games are cancelled or if the Canadian team does not participate.

— The CBC announced it is dropping plans for radio and television coverage of the Games at a cost to the state-owned corporation of more than $5 million. Cancellation of coverage is based on the government's decision, CBC President Al Johnson said.

A few of the disappointed Canadian athletes viewed the situation as part of a larger picture, although that didn't ease the disappointment.

However, one prominent athlete — pentathlon star Diane Jones Konihowski of Edmonton who currently is training in New Zealand — said she will try to obtain a visa to enter the Soviet Union and compete as an individual and, if necessary, not return to Canada until after the Games.

"I don't know what the ruling is on it, but I'm going to try to compete as an individual," she said in a

B.C. Fed to help in police dispute

By MIKE HUGHES

The top labor body in the province has agreed to supply the 300 policemen with a negotiator, research assistant and public relations officer in an effort to reach a settlement.

The policemen were talking strike after mediation efforts to reach an agreement with the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association collapsed last week at the initial meeting.

However, union spokesman Bryan Bailey said today negotiators for the four area police forces felt a strike was not the answer.

He said municipal police forces in B.C. don't have the reserves or the clout that other large unions have to wage an effective strike to back contract demands.

In addition, he said, there hasn't been any real bargaining between the parties and so it seemed premature to consider walking off the job.

Last week the labor federation agreed to have its secretary-treasurer Dave MacIntyre act as chief negotiator, and to make available the services of federation research director Dave Rice and communications director Tom Fawkes.

About 100 policemen turned up at a general membership meeting Tuesday night and voted unanimously in favor of holding off on any strike vote until further efforts are made to reach a negotiated settlement.

Bailey said the policemen, whose representative body the B.C. Federation of Police Officers is not affiliated with the federation, consider themselves fortunate to have the labor body's assistance.

"This is really a crucial year in terms of setting the atmosphere between the GVLRA and ourselves," he said.

"I hope this will get negotiations going again and we can quickly arrive at a collective agreement.

"However, that remains to be seen."

Bailey said MacIntyre hopes to arrange for meetings next week involving mediator Bob Almgren.

IF YOUR DOG POOP IT... PLEASE SCOOP IT!

Doggy do in dew sparks doggerel

Oak Bay resident Larry Talarico has taken steps he hopes will stop him stepping in doggy droppings.

Fed up with the numbers of canine calling cards left on his boulevard, he had a custom sign painted and nailed it to the utility pole outside his house at 3531 Plymouth Road.

A man who keeps his lawns and gardens trim and neat, Talarico says he's tired of having to watch his step while gardening and mowing the lawn.

The Talaricos' children and other neighborhood kids kept stepping in the stuff, too.

"We just put that up as sort of a light joke," he said today, hoping that dog owners would get the message.

There are a lot of dogs in the neighborhood, and their manure seems to sprout on Talarico's lawn after their owner's nightly walks with Fido, he added.

"Some of them have quite large dogs," he said with a laugh.

So on Plymouth Road in the Uplands, "if your dog poop it, please scoop it."

He hopes his individual dog defecation control measure may lead to municipal action to enact a poop and scoop bylaw such as West Vancouver adopted last year.

Other major U.S. cities, dog-loving New York included, have also established strict bylaws to handle the messy problem.

Canada turns screw on Iran

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan announced today that Canada is expelling one of the two Iranian diplomats in Ottawa and tightening the economic screws to try to speed release of the 50 American hostages in Tehran. (See also earlier story on page 40).

MacGuigan warned that if diplomatic approaches soon to be made to Iran do not free the embassy captives by May 17, there will be further trade sanctions.

Today's measures, announced while MacGuigan was meeting U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance here, continue a ban on military sales and on government-backed export credits for commercial sales to Iran.

The government is also recommending that no Canadian company sign any export or service contracts with the Iranian revolutionary regime.

Oil companies are being told it is inappropriate to buy oil from Iran, although purchases were cut off last fall when the embassy was seized Nov. 4.

Vance was expected to press Ottawa to take a firmer stand on Iran but the timing of MacGuigan's announcement was surprising. He told reporters Tuesday night there would be no statement on stepped up sanctions during Vance's one-day visit.

It followed by one day a decision to support the U.S. sponsored boycott of the Moscow Olympics, announced on the eve of Vance's arrival for private meetings with MacGuigan and Prime Minister Trudeau.

The Canadian line on Iran and Afghanistan has toughened dramatically in the last several days. Only last week Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau publicly resisted opposition calls to match the boycott stand taken by the former Progressive Conservative government before hearing explanations from Vance on latest Middle East developments.

A spokesman at the Iranian embassy said he was not surprised at the government decision; it had been delivered earlier in the day.

"The announcement was made only because of Vance's visit," he said.

"We are not angry because Canada must always follow the Anglo-American alliance."

Second secretary Mansour Shahneh is to leave for Tehran Friday.

No visas will be granted to Iranian students to enter Canada except for a small number who had already secured provisional approval.

Emphasizing that this country is acting in concert with the Western allies, MacGuigan said "the government will consider implementing further measures in the trade field if diplomatic approaches to be made shortly by Canada and other countries to Iran regarding the hostage situation do not yield satisfactory results by May 17."

Exxon net gushes up 102%

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, today reported its first-quarter profits surged by nearly 102 per cent from last year's levels to a record $1.925 billion.

The quarterly profit was the biggest ever for any U.S. corporation, eclipsing the previous record — American Telephone and Telegraph Co.'s net income of $1.466 billion in the quarter ended last Aug. 31.

Exxon's revenues in the latest quarter climbed to $27.6 billion from $18.8 billion, and earnings per share rose to $4.40 from $2.16 in last year's first-quarter, when profits were $955 million.

Among other oil firms reporting first-quarter profits today:

— Shell Oil Co., ranked eighth in the U.S., earned $373 million, cr $2.42 a share, up 66.5 per cent from $224 million.

— No. 12 Occidental Petroleum Corp. earned $277.9 million, or $3.62 a share, up 236.4 per cent from $82.6 million.

Tuesday, Texaco President John McKinley said his company's operating earnings rose 97.6 per cent in the first quarter "after several years of relatively low earnings" to $600.6 million.

Piano's finale not so grand

Astonished patrons at Vanier Hall watched helplessly as the hall's $40,000 grand piano toppled off the stage into the orchestra pit.

During a violin-cello recital by Paul Meister and Terry Sturge someone pushed the button which controls the orchestra pit level. The pit had been raised to the level of the stage and when the button was pushed it began to descend.

As the pit lowered the piano, partly on stage and partly on the lift, began to list. Musicians frantically tried to move the heavy instrument but it reached the critical inclination and flipped over.

One witness said: "There was a sound like a lot of drums and harps."

Saanich eyes beach riot squads

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Saanich police department is considering training special riot squads to handle wild beach parties like the one at Mount Douglas Park last weekend, Insp. Ted Owens said today.

A special public meeting between police and Mount Douglas area residents will be held at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Saanich council chambers to discuss possible solutions to the beach party problem.

Among the other options are police-dog patrols and designating remote beaches for teenage parties.

But hauling out riot gear is a last resort, as are the dog patrols, in Owens' opinion.

"The last thing I want to see is people having a chunk taken out of them by a dog," Owens said.

He said residents who branded officers cowards after they refused to break up the Mount Douglas party don't realize the police department lacks the manpower to handle this type of incident.

"We're bound by lack of manpower, that's what it boils down to."

Mayor Mel Couvelier said today the municipality is getting a number of letters and calls from residents concerned about the noisy parties attended by 200 or 300 teenagers.

But the youngsters gather in such large numbers it's difficult for the police to do anything.

"The difficulty is, if we send them down it seems to invite trouble. It seems to make the matter worse," Couvelier said.

"You've really got to send down a large force to do any good."

A request last year by the police department for more overtime funds to assign 10 or 12 extra officers certain patrols was turned down because the municipality wasn't satisfied the department was using resources properly, he said.

"Their present policy of not having a full crew on weekends is not good management."

The manpower question has been central to delicate negotiations with the police association, said Couvelier, who is chairman of the Saanich police board.

The department wants a special overtime fund of about $30,000 to provide

100 die as tanker, ship ram

MAESTRE DE CAMPO ISLAND, Philippines (UPI) — Officials today reported nearly 100 people dead in a collision between a tanker and an inter-island passenger ship jammmed with almost 1,000 persons that sank in shark-infested waters.

About 50 persons were on the passenger vessel's disco lounge dancing when a "loud bang" sent the dancers tumbling to the floor and water gushed into the ship, sinking it in minutes.

Shattered wooden planks, cargo boxes and abandoned orange life jackets from the sunken passenger ship Don Juan littered the sea 20 miles south of Manila.

Officials of the Negros Navigation Co., owners of Don Juan, said responding merchant ships rescued 888 persons from the 2,310-ton Don Juan and recovered the bodies of 96 dead. About 10 others were missing and the object of a search by a coast guard vessel, a helicopter and a plane.

The Don Juan carried about 890 passengers and from 90 to 100 crewmen, authorities said.

Authorities suggested the collision was the result of a miscalculation.

Witnesses said the collision took place in a calm sea and bright moonlight and that the two vessels obviously saw they were headed toward a crash.

Water immediately gushed into the inter-island passenger ship and passengers scrambled to the sun deck.

Water poured into the liner through the gaping hole, described "as big as a truck," and passengers scrambled to the sun deck. Screaming passengers leaped into the sea.

"It went down nose first, then flipped on its underside," said businessman Benito Go, 24, a passenger on the Don Juan. "In 15 minutes the water swallowed the ship."

The tanker suffered only a dent, and rescued many of the passengers from the Don Juan.

Authorities said the ship sank in 816 feet of water in an area of the Tablas Strait that is known to be shark infested.

After seeing "large holes" in the forward part of the Don Juan, Manuel Pineda, 51, a radio technician who was aboard the Don Juan, said he rushed to the dining room upstairs.

He said panic broke out aboard the ship as the passengers were pushed to one side as the vessel tilted.

"I heard later there was someone or some people eaten by sharks," Pineda said from a hospital in the central Philippine city of Bacolod, where he was being treated for a back injury.

The Don Juan's owner's said a distress signal from the ship was intercepted by its station in Bacolod late Tuesday.

"We're sinking! We're sinking! Abandon ship! Abandon ship! Abandon ship!" Then the radio went dead.

Restaurant shots leave man dead

RICHMOND (CP) — One man was dead and another was in hospital with gunshot wounds following a shooting in a restaurant here Tuesday night.

The gunman, in his mid 20s, was the object of a massive police manhunt.

RCMP said no motive for the shooting had been determined. However, a spokesman said it appeared the gunman did not know the victims.

Police declined to release names immediately.

Owen said two or three officers faced with strong verbal abuse and flying beer bottles from an unruly mob of up to 300 youths can't risk breaking up a beach party at 2 a.m.

"It's too far gone at that point, the ringleaders start trouble and the rest of them follow," Owens said.

Officers on the beach have returned to find squad car windows smashed and tires flat.

Thousands of dollars damage are also caused to beaches and private property, according to Owens, who said the municipal clean up after the Mount Douglas Park incident last weekend will likely cost taxpayers $1,000.

During peak summer months as many as five beach parties of between 50 and 300 young people take place in one evening, keeping officers busy all night.

Police say it's not unusual to confiscate 50 case of beer and smaller amounts of hard liquor and wine.

Owens said sending more than two or three officers to control the parties would leave the rest of the municipality virtually unprotected.

The department is counting on residents to report all signs of teenagers gathering near beaches, so police can get there early to defuse any potential problem situations.

Olympic dream shattered

telephone interview from Auckland with a Toronto radio station. "Unless there's a complete boycott by Canada of everything involving Russia, I can't agree with what's happening."

Victoria gymnast Philip Delesalle said he will retire from competition after the Canadian national gymnastics championship next month because of the Canadian government's decision.

Delesalle, gold medallist at the 1978 Commonwealth Games and a competitor at the 1976 Olympics, said he had planned the Moscow Olympics as his last major event before retiring after 15 years of competition.

"I was prepared but I'm still disappointed," Delesalle said in an interview from his Port Alberni training centre.

"I've been at the sport 15 years and now there are other things I want to do. There should be no connection between sports and politics — the super powers are just playing games and it has affected 11,000 atheletes the world over."

Olympic silver medalist Greg Joy of Vancouver, a high jumper, called the federal government's announcement "hypocritical and upsetting."

"The government and the COA change their minds more than I change my underwear," Joy said from his training site at Long Beach, Calif.

Martin Riley of Winnipeg, captain of the men's basketball team that, ironically, qualified for the Olympics on Monday, took a different position.

"I don't think athletes should be so small as to think only of themselves," Riley said in an interview from San Juan, Puerto Rico, where the team is competing in a pre-Olympic qualifying tournament. "There is a larger picture.

"Anything any country can do to stop another country from going into a third country can be justified."

In Lausanne, Switzerland, the International Olympic Committee today studied its dwindling options to prevent the Olympics from crumbling.

The crisis meeting at the IOC's Swiss headquarters coincided with the formal announcement by the West German government, recommending its athletes follow the U.S. lead and stay away from Moscow.

"It looks inevitable now," said one well-placed IOC executive board member. "We are very pessimistic."

IOC President Lord Killanin scheduled a news conference following the meeting of the IOC's executive board.

Faced with a spreading boycott there were indications of disagreement among IOC members about what action to take.

A vacant lot next to Saanich public works yard has been selected as a possible site for the new Saanich police headquarters.

The property, at Borden and McKenzie, is the first choice of the police board.

Council will be asked at a budget meeting Thursday to consider including funds in this year's estimates for preliminary design drawings.

A new police building could be put to referendum during the November municipal elections, the police board was informed Tuesday.

The report of a fact-finding team that visited four new police buildings in Ontario will be ready in six weeks, said police board member John Tribe.

Is Maggie moving or isn't she?

Is the Maggie moving or isn't she?

A spokesman for the B.C. Steamship Company said today the Princess Marguerite will be moved from her berth off Belleville Street across the Inner Harbor to the Burrard Yarrows shipyard.

But Burrard Yarrows' manager Don Challinor says it's news to him.

And even if it's true, he said, the yard has no orders to do any work on the ship.

The report of the move raised speculation the Maggie might yet be resurrected, but officially, she's merely being moved to make way for the Queen of Prince Rupert, to be delivered for use on the Victoria-Seattle run May 12.

But one source within the company recalled that a refit of the famous old ship would take only about five days, 10 at the most.

The Times also learned a contract for reupholstering 100 chairs aboard the Marguerite has gone to Capital Drapery and Upholstery on Bridge Street.

At last report, the chairs were still aboard the Maggie in one of the forward lounges.

Are unions overloading arbitration system?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Binding arbitration is becoming the preferred choice of public sector unions who find that it yields better settlements than over-the-table bargaining.

However, the people who make arbitration work say the process is becoming too frequent, too expensive and too complicated.

Public sector unions in British Columbia governed by the Essential Services Disputes Act have the exclusive right to opt for binding arbitration in contract disputes.

Joe Weiler, an arbitrator and associate law professor at the University of B. C., produced figures at a recent seminar to show that unions are lining up for compulsory settlements.

Parties in the health care field seem to find it particularly difficult to reach direct-negotiation agreements. Police and firefighters follow close behind.

Weiler also produced figures indicating that unions cut the bargaining process short to get their case before an arbitrator quickly.

Because of that, Weiler said, the process has become so complicated that arbitrators must become instant experts in various public service sectors to bring down fair agreements.

"The hearing is kind of a crash-course in the technology of the industry," Weiler said.

Gaining an understanding of the staff hierarchy, equipment, and the issues involved can place a staggering demand on the arbitrator, he said.

"Invariably what happens . . . is that the arbitrator enters the fray with a Bible, a few pens and pads, and one week later walks away with several suitcases of documents, exhibits, written notes of transcripts and very little understanding of the industry for which he is to settle the employment conditions."

Weiler said he thinks the act should be amended to take advantage of new mediation processes being used in the United States such as med-arb (mediation first and arbitration if neccesary) and final offer selection (where the parties in dispute put their final offers to a board which picks one as a final settlement).

Any method that gets disputing parties to come up with their own agreement is better than one which results in a decision imposed from outside, he says.

Jim Matkin, B. C.'s deputy labor minister, agrees that settlement through direct bargaining is preferable, but not always practical in the face of the closure of a hospital or other vital service.

Carl Anshelm, a former private-sector negotiator for B. C. truckers, thinks a shortage of arbitrators is the problem.

He also says it's unfair to employers that unionists are allowed to opt for arbitration because management never knows whether the union is serious or just building up a case for arbitration.

7th inning stretch for beer now

VANCOUVER (CP) — Baseball and beer almost got together for the first time in Vancouver Tuesday night.

On the field of Nat Bailey Stadium Vancouver Canadians and Hawaii Islanders played Pacific Coast League professional baseball while in the concourse under the stadium perhaps as many as 1,000 customers gulped beer before the game and between innings.

Most of the customers thought it an improvement over the dry days.

However, they also thought that it wasn't good enough.

The Canadians have been granted an E liquor licence.

This means the club can sell beer in a marked-off area underneath the stands before the game and up to the seventh inning. Customers cannot take beer into the stands.

"I feel like I'm sneaking into the john in high school to smoke a cigarette," said a 61-year-old patron.

"It's like drinking it out in the car," said another man.

Canadian's general manager Jack Quinn, said he is hopeful that after the one-year trial of the E licence the provincial government will amend the legislation to allow beer sales in the stands.

One stranded Iranian allowed back to U.S.

VANCOUVER (CP) — One of seven students stranded in Canada when the United States closed its borders to Iranians will be allowed to re-enter the U.S.

Tom Marquis, a spokesman for the U.S. consulate-general's office, said Tuesday that the state department has approved the re-entry application of a male Washington State University student who wishes to remain unidentified.

The state department still is considering the application of Mitra Monghate, another student at the Washington State campus in Pullman, Wash., he said.

Monghate is staying at the Burnaby home of Senator Ed Lawson, as a guest of his daughter, Wendy, while awaiting a decision on her bid to return to the U.S.

Marquis declined to comment on either case, saying that visa information is confidential.

But he did say that the student must have qualified under strict rules imposed by the state department in order to have gained clearance to re-enter the country.

Five other Iranians, who had been studying at the University of Idaho, only a few kilometres from Washington State, have been refused permission to return to the U.S. The students are staying temporarily at the University of British Columbia while sympathizers try to get their case reopened.

Dr. Richard Gibbs, president of the University of Idaho, planned to make an appeal in Washington, D.C., to have the five re-admitted.

Gibbs's office said in a statement Tuesday that the president is on a previously-planned business trip that included a stop in Washington.

Big one won't get away this year

VANCOUVER (CP) — This could really be the year of the big fish stories.

British Columbia sports fishermen are expecting to land larger salmon this summer than they have in several years and they are attributing their good fortune to last month's strike by unionized herring fishermen and the federal government's decision to close the lucrative herring fishery.

Independent commercial fishermen took about 17,000 tons of the herring, but left an unusually large number for the salmon to munch on and grow fat.

This summer, provincial and federal fisheries officials estimate upwards of 400,000 fresh and salt water fishermen will take to their boats in search of the several species of salmon and rainbow trout native to B.C.'s coastal and inland waters.

The exact number of fishermen is unknown because only fresh water anglers who must buy licences are ever counted. Officials can only estimate the number of salt water or tidal fishermen.

However, there was an indication in Monday's throne speech that the federal government will soon introduce a salt-water sports fishing licence.

Colin Smith, chairman of the Sports Fishing Advisory Board which makes non-binding recommendations to the federal department of fisheries and oceans, said that when Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc was in Vancouver last week he said a $5 salt-water licence is "just around the corner."

Most anglers favor licensing because it would give them a louder voice in fisheries management, said Bill Masse, executive secretary of the advisory board and an economist with the fisheries department.

Smith said sports fishermen take only 1.4 to four per cent of the total B.C. catch and most regulations, if applied only to them, will have little net effect. However, Masse said in 1975, the last year for which figures were available, sports fishermen took 1.2 million fish, about 10 per cent of the 11.8 million taken by commercial fishermen.

Microscopic Canadiana

The debate over the size of the Tillicum shopping centre is a duplicate in miniature of the strained relations between Western Canada and the country's industrial heart.

Like the Alberta government, Saanich council wants to enlarge its commercial and manufacturing tax base. Like Ontario, Victoria wants to preserve the commercial heartland. And in the wings, the Western Community of Colwood and Langford which, like Newfoundland, wants a piece of the action. Taking the role of the federal government is the Capital Regional District.

Despite pleas from the CRD, two developers and some council members, the Saanich aldermen who support the Tillicum expansion remain convinced the opposition is subverting Saanich's economic destiny.

Like the Western Canada-Ontario dispute, this battle of words is tugging at the fabric that bonds the parts into a whole.

A small re-cap: On April 14 five of the nine councillors recommended removal of a convenant on Cal Investment Ltd.'s 30-acre parcel at Tillicum Road and Burnside Avenue. The effect would be to increase the size of the shopping centre from 295,000 square feet to about 500,000 square feet.

This recommendation contradicted council assurances given to the Capital Regional District last year that the size would be limited to 295,000 square feet.

The CRD says that a larger shopping centre would violate the regional plan agreed to by all municipalities of greater Victoria. The plan is designed to promote urban growth in the western communities, while preserving the economic viability of Victoria's commercial core.

The decision to limit the size of Tillicum led to proposals for shopping centres in Langford and Royal Oak. Both developments will be jeopardized if the size of Tillicum is doubled.

This week, council was to decide whether the Tillicum expansion would be allowed. The decision was delayed until a public meeting is held and studies are made on traffic congestion and road improvements. But the emotional tone of the arguments presented by the expansion proponents suggest that few minds will be changed.

Alderman Sandy Noel sounded somewhat like Premier Lougheed. "It is time for Saanich to break out of the shackles. We are no longer a bedroom community of Victoria."

He contended that Victoria has failed to provide downtown parking for Saanich shoppers, has snubbed high density development and has looked to Saanich to pick up the housing slack. Saanich struggles to provide services with only a suburban tax base while Victoria rolls in money from commercial and tourist-related developments.

Alderman Mary Casilio didn't want to be dictated to by outside interests. She felt Victoria had no right to stick its nose in Saanich's business. Alderman Irene Block said Victoria had approved shopping malls away from its downtown area and now was complaining about Saanich. Aldermen Ed Lum and Geoff Vantreight argued along similiar lines.

Alderman John Mika suggested that these aldermen seemed motivated by revenge rather than any sense of fair play.

It would be entirely proper for Saanich to challenge the regional plan if council believes it is detrimental to municipal interest. However, it should do so directly, not by going back on a commitment already made.

Also, before a final decision is reached, both the region and Saanich should collect some facts on one large versus several smaller regional shopping centres so that logic and reason can replace emotion.

Perhaps as in the disagreements between Ontario and Western Canada, something worthwhile could result. It's obvious that Canada should re-evaluate the barriers preventing the distribution of wealth. The same applies to Victoria and Saanich. Tillicum is an inevitable outcome of Victoria's resistance to the idea of revenue-sharing.

Royal jelly

A small word in defence of a Victoria landmark.

The Empress, the grand old lady of the city's hotel scene was singled out as a place not fit for royalty to eat. Federal health inspectors travelling in advance of the May 2 visit by Princess Alexandra, found that the present food handling system isn't up to scratch.

Health inspections are routinely carried out by local authorities and obviously the Empress is up to their standards. But the visit by Ottawa's officials begs one to ask whether there is one standard for the ordinary folk and another for royalty.

Since that appears to be the case, perhaps the federal inspectors would make the rounds of all the hotels in Victoria and publicize the results. Who knows, maybe visiting royalty would have to pack a box lunch.

End-run around journalists

OTTAWA — Ottawa journalists have been clamoring for more press conferences with Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau.

God knows why.

As Friday's session in the National Press theatre proved, these occasions are not informative, essential or entertaining. They provide a certain amount of fodder for the TV cameras, a modicum of grist for the radio and press-wire mills, and a number of opportunities for the Prime Minister to lay out a line of guff. That's all.

When Joe Clark was prime minister — a blip of time now fading off history's screen — the press conference tended to be a free-for-all, with journalists demanding firm answers to their questions, and snorting with derision when they failed to get them.

Oil prices

Consider an exchange that began when John Ferguson of The Canadian Press tried to get Trudeau to stop kidding the troops about his party's campaign promise to keep oil prices below those advertised by the Conservatives.

The Conservatives had said that prices might jump by as much as $4.50 a barrel annually between now and 1984. The Liberal position was that this was monstrous. Their oil price would be much lower, they said repeatedly, and Canadians — a gullible crew — bought it.

Thursday afternoon, a trio of energy mandarins was trotted out to untie the Liberal commitment. They hatched a new theory under which the important part of the Tory pledge was to keep Canadian prices at 85 per cent of world levels, and they had discovered — suddenly, after the Liberals took over — that this could mean jumps of as much as $11-per-barrel annually.

Under this new development, the Liberals could hike oil prices, as they intend to do, much higher than the Tories' $4.50 a barrel, and still claim they had kept their campaign pledge.

The mandarins discovered that the Tory scheme was loopy just in time to save the Liberals from embarrassment. There are those who believe this was a coincidence — just as there are those who believe babies are born under cabbages.

John Ferguson is not one of them. He wanted to find out what price the Prime Minister had in mind for oil, and whether it would be below or above a $4.50 annual increase. He got nowhere. With a straight-arm technique he might have picked up from Red Grange, Trudeau galloped off down the field.

The exact price of oil increases was still being negotiated with the provinces, he said, and that was that.

There was no way to press for an explanation as to how this squared with the campaign promise, because there were 13 other questioners lined up, and three minutes left in the conference.

Not that the journalists show much inclination to press Trudeau.

Peter Desbarats, of Global TV, did try to pursue the prime minister on the subject of the Quebec referendum, and his role in it, but with only two questions to ask, and no support from his colleagues, Desbarats was soon brushed off.

With Clark, the approach was different. In some conferences, he took the role of a Russian peasant tossed off the back of the sled, with journalists playing the wolf-pack.

But Trudeau is handled with deference.

The format of the conference adds to the man's advantages. His questioners break into three readily recognizable groups: Those who want to ask a question so that their pretty phizzes will be on the screen, those who have been ordered by editors to raise a specific issue, usually for home consumption, and TV journalists, required to produce something on tape to prove they went to work.

In this clamorous horde, there are always more questioners than time, and always too many subjects to permit the pursuit of any one.

Time factor

In the House of Commons, the proper place to ask the prime minister questions, time is a problem, but it is not compounded by the limpness of the questioners. Au contraire.

There, Trudeau is barracked when he tries to spread marmalade all over the members.

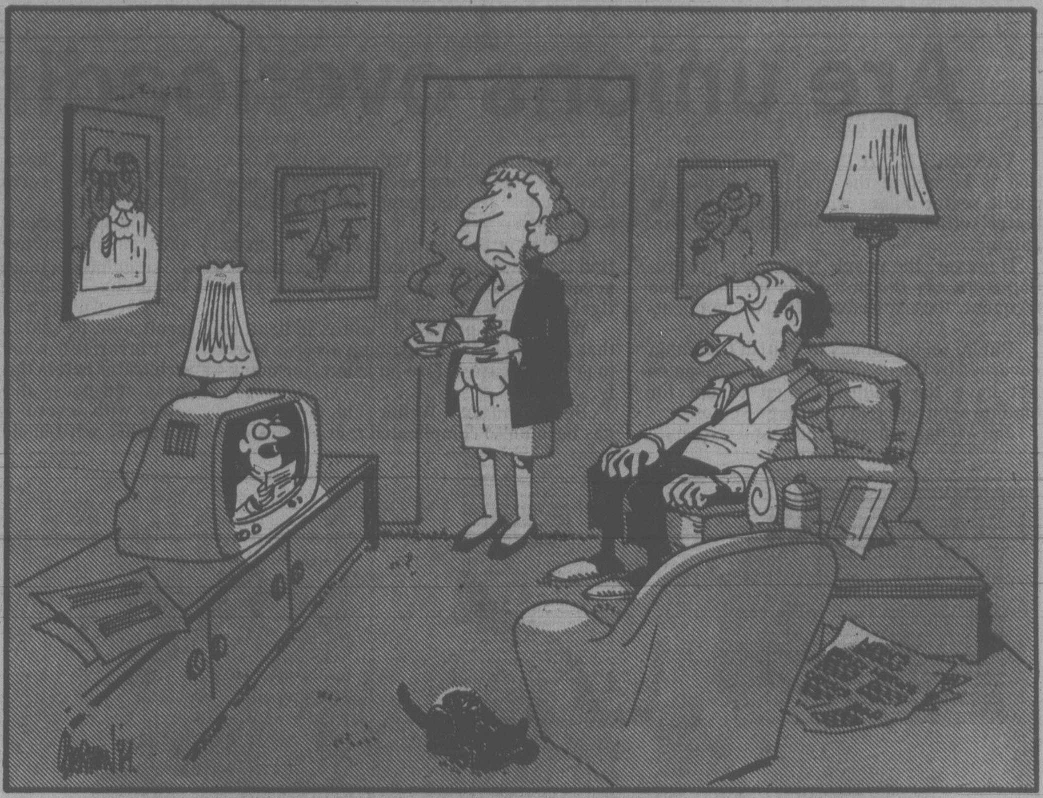
But journalists are no match for the prime minister. He is not only too smart for them, they are too disorganized, and too timid, for him.

Friday, he was able to put exactly what he wanted in the Saturday papers, on Iran, the Olympics and the referendum, and to avoid anything unpleasant.

For him it was a triumph.

For the journalists, it was a rout.

Why they want more of the same is a mystery.



"Will everbody please sit down and brace themselves . . . cause here is the news."

Why so easy?

In the incredible world of B.C. politics, it is indeed reassuring to know that our experts are confident that a direct link to the mainland over (or under) 20 miles of treacherous water is a realistic and achievable venture.

Now that we have that straightened out, will some of you guys nip down to Yates Street and tell dear old Jim Campbell and his boys at the Capital Region office how to lay 600 feet of sewer pipe out from Clover Point so we can clean up our beaches for the summer. You know they've been struggling with that for three years.

How come a bridge or tunnel is possible when a few wires for up-island hydro or a small pipe for natural gas is so damn difficult, huh? — Ian Cass, 3844 Merriman Drive.

Berlin helped

The article in your April 16 paper by Wolf van Eckhardt, "Olympics helped open window to the world", interested me very much, as I attended the 1936 Olympics as a spectator. The writer's memories complement my own, recalling many meetings with ordinary Germans on a person-to-person basis, which made the tragedy of the Second World War a matter of sorrow for those who suffered on both sides.

The group I was with consisted almost entirely of American students. A young French man and several British visitors also joined us. Those who were not American seemed to me to be much aware of the abuses of the Nazi regime and of the war approaching, confirmed by large numbers of troops everywhere. The family with which I stayed in Berlin was most cordial, but turned aside all questions about the treatment of Jews and the obvious preparations for war, perhaps from ignorance or powerlessness.

It seems to me, in retrospect, that the chief value of the visit, as von Eckhardt says, was the opportunity for human contacts, but most of us left with very little increased knowledge or changed attitudes about the regime itself.

We were present when Hitler refused to shake hands with Jesse Owens after he won the gold medal, and I remember how incensed the Americans were, that Hitler should refuse to touch an American who happened to be black. Owens' later career and whole life were ennobled by the experience, as he became a spokesman for human rights and an illustration of the stupidity of race prejudice. Similarly, I recall a fist fight on Unter den Linden when an argument developed over the Joe Louis-Max Schmeling match, when the Germans denied Louis' victory, since he (they said) was sub-human. Later, I read that Louis told Americans, during the Second World War, "There's plenty wrong with America, but Hitler won't fix it."

I am sure that the trip contributed to my life-long concern for increased understanding between peoples, and my efforts to find peaceful ways of solving international problems and avoiding wars. Similarly, Canadian athletes and visitors who attend the 1980 Olympics in the Soviet Union, could become advocates for peace in a world which is threatened with annihilation. — Edith Adamson, 402-118 Croft Street.

Out of NORAD

Next month Canada's membership in NORAD (North American Air Defence Treaty) comes up for renewal. Our country's involvement in this treaty, besides "protection of Canada" (?) involves "surveillance and warning systems in anti-submarine defence and in measures designed to protect the retaliatory capacity of the U.S." (1975 renewal document).

NORAD does not serve Canada's interests. In 1975 Richard Rohmer, author and reserve military officer, stated that it could contribute to Canada's subservience to the U.S. This prediction has proven to be correct. In the 1975 renewal contract Canadian commanders were to have charge of Canadian air space. But the November, 1979, six-minute alert originating in a computer error at NORAD headquarters in Colorado has shown how little control Canada has.

Because of our involvement in NORAD we expend billions of dollars ($4-5 billion alone for outdated F18A fighter planes) which line the pockets of the U.S. military industrial complex. This money would much better serve the interests of the Canadian people if it were spent on much needed social services which have been drastically cut.

Concerned citizens must demand that Canada end its involvement in this treaty when it comes up for renewal next month. Write to Prime Minister Trudeau and Defence Minister MacGuigan voicing your concerns. — Freda Knott, for the Victoria Coalition for Disarmament, 1831 Fern Street.

Editor's note: For anyone interested in writing, Mark MacGuigan is minister of external affairs. Gilles Lamontagne is defence minister.

Manure power

How wonderful of Dr. Pat McGeer to start promoting the possible use of natural gas for powering our energy hungry vehicles. It is, of course, not a new idea. I recently saw an excellent film from the National Film Board entitled Bates' Car - Sweet As A Nut which describes how an enterprising English gentleman powers his car with methane gas which he produced by letting barnyard manure naturally break down in a digester.

It is my humble opinion that Dr. McGeer should pick up on this particular concept immediately as there is a seemingly endless supply of the same raw material that Mr. Bate used to make his gas available right here in our city — down at the Parliament Buildings. There must be enough muck-raking going on in there daily to start the biggest methane gas reserve west of the Rockies. So come on, Dr. Pat McGeer! Tell your cohorts in the legislature to keep on doing what they do best and we'll lick the energy problem in no time. — P. N. Rossner, 812 Daffodil Avenue.

Helping children

Your readers may not have heard of the charitable work being done by Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Darby with their unique doll house.

They were fortunate in getting an older home and in being able to display therein their private collection of dolls, toys, games and other nostalgia.

The collection is open to view by appointment only. One telephones 479-0140 for a viewing time. After the tour visitors may make a donation which will go to a children's cause. Thus Mr. and Mrs. Darby share their doll house with many children.

For the first three months of 1980 all donations went to the Dogwood School for retarded "special" children, to provide extra playground equipment.

For the next three months — April, May and June — donations will go to assist the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation. We who work with the local Cystic Fibrosis chapter are grateful. It is especially appropriate since May is Cystic Fibrosis month.

We would urge everyone to take the opportunity of making a donation and at the same time enjoying the pleasure of this unique collection. — Mrs. M. K. Beeching, 3826 Merriman Drive.

Thanks to ferries

We, the 26 Kiwanis Villa residents who made a ferry trip April 10, want to thank the B.C. Ferry Corporation for the royal treatment it gave us as senior citizens. Friendly city

An eventful plane trip to Victoria on Feb. 29: My flight was to leave Regina at 8 a.m. but with trouble with frost from the cold night the flight was cancelled at 3:30 p.m. At 5 p.m. I was on a plane to Winnipeg so I could catch a flight from there to Vancouver, and then on to Victoria. The lady at the Air Canada office in Regina sent a message to my sister in Victoria that I was delayed but would arrive at midnight.

After arrival, when I was looking around at the bus depot, a stranger noticed I was looking weary from a long day. I was looking for a taxi but this kind, thoughtful man, with another man and their wives, said to me to get in the car. He took my luggage to his car trunk and drove me to the Shamrock Motel, even insisting on carrying my luggage into the motel where an attendant was expecting me. In the moment of surprise I even didn't get his name but I do know it is men of his kind that makes Victoria a friendly place.

There were so many cases of friends old and new that had me in their homes or came to my sister's to visit with me. So all those that made my visit memorable in any way, may I say a sincere thank you. — Harold C. Wilson, 2225 Elphinstone Street, Regina, Sask.

Deserved more

On April 17, we attended the Bastion Theatre Company performance of Jitters at The McPherson Playhouse. The audience's recognition was extremely apathetic. Not only were no curtain calls given and the final applause inaudible, but added to this, the theatre's seats were vacated within two minutes of the closing line. It seems this particular audience was unwilling to provide reinforcement for a job well-done.

The Bastion Theatre Company has expereinced its best season ever in regards to audience attendance. If those at the April 17 performance were an example of a "good audience", then we sympathize with the hardworking cast and crew of any production staged in Vicktoria. We thoroughly enjoyed the performance and feel the cast and crew deserve another — this time audible and more lengthy — round of applaouse. — Deborah Kastak and Janet McLellan, Craigdarroch Residence, University of Victoria.

Two unions

I refer you to an article in the Times, of April 10 entitled: "Foresters threaten strike" (page 20). Please understand that it is not the foresters who are in dispute with the ministry of forests, but instead the technical forestry component of the B.C. Government Employees Union. As licensed professionals, foresters are represented in bargaining and other matters by the B.C. Government Professional Employees Association, and are not affiliated with the aforementioned union. — Alan D. Fry, Foresters Chapter, B.C. Government Professional Employees Association.

Man Called Intrepid History or fiction?

By JONATHAN MANTHORPE
Toronto Star

LONDON — The best-selling book about the wartime exploits of Canadian millionaire Sir William Stephenson, A Man Called Intrepid, has been lambasted here as "pure bunkum," "fiction," and "self-advertisement."

The streams of invective are from Hugh Trevor-Roper, the noted historian and former senior member of the British Secret Service.

Trevor-Roper says Stephenson, who was the link between British chiefs of staff and the American government during the war, was involved in only a few of the secret exploits he claims to have played a part in in the book.

The criticism of Canadian author William Stevenson's book was sparked by the televising here of a movie version of A Man Called Intrepid. It was shown in Canada last year.

The movie so enraged former Secret Service personnel here that Colonel Maurice Buckmaster, who headed the Special Operation Executive, and whose task was to organize resistance movements, broke his code of silence and wrote to The Times.

Buckmaster's criticism of the film is that it centres on the exploits of an agent code-named Madeline, who was in real-life an Indian named Noor Inayat Kahn. "Her real wartime task bore no resemblance to that portrayed on the screen," Buckmaster wrote.

"To surround her with incompetents, intended by use of their real names to represent actual men and women bearing those names is cheap and disgusting.

"I find it intolerable and in deplorable taste to use in an entirely false and indeed ludicrously incompetent scenario, the names of real people," Buckmaster said.

Trevor-Roper also castigates the movie-makers for making real people appear as fools simply for dramatic effect.

"The film is not merely a travesty of fact, it is also a wanton insult to a living memory and living people."

But Trevor-Roper says the bulk of his considerable scorn is for Sir William Stephenson himself, who now lives in retirement in Bermuda, and who was played in the film by the suave British actor David Niven.

"The book pretended to be history. In fact, it is pure fiction — not to say bunkum," Trevor-Roper said.

"In fact, it is his second venture at self-advertisement, for in 1962 he commissioned a biography of himself. Sixteen years later, his appetite has grown and by now he has evidently persuaded himself, almost single-handed, that he dictated and won the secret war. A sad case of aged vanity," Trevor-Roper said.

Stephenson's job, Trevor-Roper said, was "to liaise with the Americans and to direct in Canada one of our camps for training agents. This was Camp X near Oshawa.

"But he had no responsibility for Europe, no connection with the details of any operation there, no involvement with the Ultra Secret. All his claims in this area are pure fantasy."

Marriage misery in Japan

By ROBERT WHYMANT
Manchester Guardian

TOKYO — You are driving along the highway when a big earthquake occurs. What is the first thing you would do? Seventy per cent of Japanese motorists surveyed would stop the car. Thirty-seven per cent would find the nearest telephone and call their employers to ask for instructions. Only nine per cent would call home to reassure the wife and see if the house or flat is still standing.

The survey, which Tokyo police will use to devise a traffic drill for the anticipated earthquake, incidentally confirms a stereotype to which we have come to expect Japanese males to conform. This is the image of a workaholic whose allegiance to the company takes precedence over marriage.

Sociologists have made it easier to understand this phenomenon by likening the firm to the rural community which three generations ago commanded the loyalty of all Japanese, the office hierarchy to the vertical bond of the village, and the boss of Mitsubishi or whatever to the feudal lord. The lapel badges on the dark suits serried in the subway correspond to the lord's heraldic crest.

The Japanese man's marriage to the company — Aisha Seishin — is by now a well-worn cliche. It is the unfair advantage Japanese firms enjoy over their foreign competitors. It is what makes married life misery for Japanese women.

It's not only that Japanese men fight to be last out of the office; the most common complaint of Japanese wives is that their husbands then go on to cabarets, or play mah-jong, with colleagues or customers, and often return home at midnight in a drunken stupor.

But the legendary subservience of Japanese women seems to be wearing thin. A poll by the prime minister's office last year revealed that 25 per cent of single women had no intention of marrying, compared to only 14 per cent so disinclined in 1972. And of the 62 per cent who wanted to marry, only 12 per cent expected marriage to bring happiness — compared to 34 per cent starry-eyed respondents in 1972. On top of this came a ministry of health and welfare survey which showed 56 per cent of divorced women did not want to remarry, an increase of 11 per cent from a decade ago.

Incidentally, the Japanese are obsessed with recording the moods and minutiae of their existence. A government survey published this month showed 36 per cent of Japanese dissatisfied with public services (compared to 49 per cent in 1973).

A recent trade union poll revealed that more people trust fortune tellers than politicians. The municipal office in Tokyo's Shinjuku district a few years ago surveyed the voting tendencies of prostitutes and found over half supported the free-enterprise Conservative party in power, and only 10 per cent voted Socialist.

After the ceremony, husbands go own way

If the Japanese neglect their wives, can they be kind to animals? The stereotyped image has been reinforced by recent publicity over the slaughter of whales, ill-treatment of pet dogs imported from England, and the mindless massacres of dolphins. So concerned is the government to refute an international flood of accusations about Japanese barbarity that the foreign minister, before leaving for Washington, was specially briefed on the need of Nagasaki fishermen to kill dolphins. This was in case U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance introduces animal cruelty into complaints about Japan's exporting of cars, and its reluctance to spend more on its defence.

The city has become a marginally more agreeable place to live in the past five or six years, thanks in no small part to the capitalist instincts of the oil sheikhs. Yet Tokyo is miserably overcrowded, and a decent home with a garden of one's own is beyond the reach of all but a small minority. This compression results in considerable strain on family life (a worker killed a neighbor whose piano playing he could no longer bear; married couples go to "love hotels" because flats are too confined to make love without the children hearing).

The Japanese claim to be as concerned with the environment as any industrialized nation and are taking pains to clean up the mess caused by the frantic growth rates which tapered off after the oil shock. A recent environment agency report noted that "Japan has experienced the severest environmental pollution in the world," but this was lessening because economic activity had slowed down in a prolonged recession. Strict car emission standards have reduced air pollution due to sulphur dioxides. Mount Fuji is now visible from Tokyo for 60 days of the year, compared with only 22 in 1973.

The main reasons for divorce, according to wives, is economic distress. The recession may have cleaned the air, but it has also accelerated the rate of "family suicides," in which parents take their own lives and those of their children. The failure of a marriage, often exacerbated by financial strains, is cited by police as the most common factor in these tragedies.

Sociologists blame family suicides on the pressures of city life, and the decline of the extended family. The Japanese employee, seeking a sense of security and community, recreates the village in the bosom of his company. But there is no place in this group for the wife, and the couple gradually grows apart.

Police report a sharp rise in these cases in recent months. On one day last month 14 people died in four instances of parents killing themselves and eight children. In one unusual case a few days ago, a company president with business worries killed himself and his wife by carbon monoxide fumes from the bath water-heater. Their 12-year-old son was found dead in another room.

Family murder-suicides are reported almost every day. This does not mean that Japanese are cruel to children — commonly they spoil them with love and extravagant presents. Indeed, it is regarded as an act of mercy to remove children who would otherwise carry through life the stigma of their parents' self-immolation.

Why I'm not a Yale man

Russell Baker

NEW YORK — New York is forever reminding you of what might have been if only you had managed your life better. Stepping from my house on a typical morning, I see two men dressed like Heinrich Himmler: jackboots and sinister black leather from crown to calf. Truncheons probably concealed in the pockets.

And I think: "If I had managed my life better I, too, might be dressed in eye-popping style, the focus of envious stares, and the world would be saying, 'There goes a man with the courage to assert himself.' "

Instead, I am swathed in anonymous flannel and tweed, carrying my timid, well-bred briefcase. There is a squeak in my obsequiously polished brown wing-tip shoes. Years ago I thought that wearing such shoes would help me pass as a Yale man. A silly, youthful miscalculation. But how was I to know that to pass as a Yale man I would also have to nail chamber pots to the tops of flagpoles and become a crony of Henry Luce — or Harry, as I would have called him — as a Yale man?

The polished wing tips were testimony to a badly managed life, but by the time I realized it, I was too set in the wing-tip habit to change, and now I am squeaking toward the Eighth Avenue bus.

A friend wants me to come see the Taj Mahal. He has built it in a television studio on the West Side. It will be used to promote the sale of beer or to encourage New Yorkers to switch their business to a friendlier bank. My friend works in the TV-commercial industry.

If I go to see the Taj Mahal I will be thrown among men who wear $300 sweaters, $50 haircuts and $20,000 teeth and arrive at the studio in $30,000 automobiles.

If I had managed life better, I would not now be approaching these men on the Eighth Avenue bus in my tweeds and 1946 wing tips. Where do you make the wrong turns in life? Where do you choose life in wing tips, life on the Eighth Avenue bus? Where do you say, "No, not for me the great haircuts, the great imported sweaters, the great teeth, the great cars"?

In my case it happened in Agra. At the Taj Mahal, in fact. On a night drenched with romantic moonlight, I went to the Taj Mahal, accompanied — such is my knack of managing life badly — by three middle-aged men, all of whom agreed that while it was a fine spectacle it would have been improved if we had brought some beer.

I found the judgment distasteful. Associating the Taj Mahal with beer seemed uncivilized. Certainly no Yale man would do it. When we left the Taj Mahal a man in filthy white pajamas and a turban threatened to hand me a 15-foot python unless I came across with a wad of rupees. I decided then and there that the Taj Mahal should never be linked with commerce.

Such are the decisions that lead us ultimately to the Eighth Avenue bus instead of the $30,000 automobile.

This reflection leaves me melancholy. I decide against revisiting the Taj Mahal in its studio setting. In any case, while keeping one hand pressed against my wallet pocket to frustrate pickpockets, I have been reading Judith Krantz's Princess Daisy and am acquiring a broader vision of where I went wrong.

I am thinking: "If I had managed life better, I would have been named Stash." Nothing could have stopped me then. The Stashes of New York bend the world to their whims. The Krantz Stash is typical of the breed: bold glance, thick brows, fighting eyes of a natural predator, brutal features but a rapid and graceful gait, one of the world's 10 best polo players, a fortune to support the wildest extravagance. "Stash had never had to ask for anything," novelists would have written of me. "Either it had been given to him or he had taken it."

The bus is approaching Eighth Avenue and 42d Street, one of the world's most dangerous places, but I am not Prince Stash, nor was meant to be. Debarking, I hide my brutal features in my tweed collar and lower my natural predator's fighting eyes to avoid the attention of men who will take what is not given freely, and scurry into the safety of 43d Street.

The squeaking of my wing tips attracts smiles of contempt from beautifully and silently shod pimps. For two cents I would take these shoes back to the shop and threaten to make a scene unless the squeak were removed at once. On the other hand, suppose the salesman resisted. He would be sure to, if he recognized that I was not a Yale man. They always do. And then, to make him happy, I would end by buying another pair of wing tips. I always do.

Mine firms told to buckle down

TORONTO (CP) — Canada's mining industry will lose its share of world markets in the 1980s, unless it invests heavily in costly high-risk exploration, the vice-president of Cominco Ltd. has said.

O. E. Owens told the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Mining and Metallurgy the industry will be unable to open the 10 new mines a year for the next 20 years needed to supply its markets.

Current industry investment of $100 million a year is one-quarter to one-half of that required to replace minerals being mined, he said. Because most new mines will be found in remote areas and deeper in the ground, they pose higher exploration risks.

And despite record profits last year, the industry does not have enough money to invest in all the exploration needed.

He told the meeting that mineral production would rise if federal and provincial governments lowered taxes and resolved conflicts over who controls resources.

today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was up sharply in moderately active mid-afternoon trading today.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said a cease-trading order issued April 18 in shares of New Kelore Mines Ltd. was rescinded today because the company is now up-to-date on required filings.

Trading in the company's shares, which was halted April 17, resumed at the opening and by 2 p.m. the stock was up two cents to 45 cents.

Trading in shares of Keeprite Inc., which was halted Monday, resumed at 2.15 p.m. but there were no trades. The stock last traded at $13⅞.

The company said the Ontario Securities Commission has approved a proposal for the repurchase of 800,000 of its outstanding common shares at $17 a share.

To satify the commission's concerns about minority shareholders, Keeprite said an offer for 400,000 shares will be made on floor of the TSE in the near future to shareholders other than the Odette Group Ltd., which owns 50.1 per cent of Keeprite's outstanding shares.

Vancouver

Prices were up in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 11:00 a.m. PST was 1,663,000 shares.

Of the stocks that traded, 143 advanced, 106 declined and 185 remained steady.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, dropping ⅛ to $6¾ on 37,835 shares and Potter Distillers A gained .05 to $1.35 on 2,000. Grouse Mountain declined .02 to .55 on 2,000 and Renn Industries remained steady at $1.60 on 1,300. Keg Restaurants advanced .05 to $2.05 and Great National Land remained steady at $1.10.

On the resource and development board, Molco Industries was steady at $6.37½ on 34,000 shares and Tintina Silver Mines rose .05 to $4.15 on 32,000. Cobre Explorations gained .14 to $1.30 on 32,000 and Northair Mines Ltd. advanced .15 to $4.55 on 28,100. Arcadia Explorations Ltd. dropped .01 to .50 and Quinstar Oil Corp. was unchanged at $2.20.

Egalite Ventures led traders on the curb exchange, gaining .07 to .48 on 32,500 shares and Gallant Gold Mines declined .05 to $2.15 on 30,950. SJ Resources advanced .01 to .51 on 17,000 and Stanley Resources gained .07 to .96 on 16,500. Lakewood Mining declined .01 to .55 and Logan Mines Ltd. gained .02 to $1.37.

New York

The stock market pushed ahead in active trading today, extending Tuesday's explosive rally after a brief-mid-morning pause.

The market's sudden turnaround after a two-month slide was touched off Tuesday by the "buy" recommendation of a leading investment adviser.

New York's Chase Manhattan Bank lowered its prime lending rate to 19 form 19½ per cent. That put the basic charge on blue-chip loans a full percentage point below its peak of 20 per cent earlier this month.

Brokers also noted that little had changed in the economic outlook to ease the recession worries that have been weighing down the market for some time. But those concerns didn't stop prices from continuing their advance.

Occidental Petroleum gained 1 to $23⅞. The company reported first quarter earnings of $3.62 a share, against $1.04 in the like period last year.

London

Golds and banks advanced.

Canadian stocks firmed.

Poor Jack!

When Jack built his house, he bought the best fire insurance available . . . the trouble is that was 15 years ago and neither Jack or his agent bothered to update his policy. Well, you know the rest — Jack's property increased in value over the years and when fire struck, he found out the hard way that his insurance was inadequate. Poor Jack. Don't you be a poor Jack — see us today for a free evaluation of your home insurance.

company reports

Fidelity Life

Fidelity Life Assurance Co. has reported assets for 1979 of $62 million, a 20-percent increase from the same period in 1978, when assets were just under $52 million.

In its annual report, the Vancouver-based insurance firm showed single premium annuities climbed 30 percent last year to $15 million. Total value of insurance in force in 1979 was $1.03 billion, up from just over $900 million in 1978.

Company president J.M.S. Cunningham said the total amount paid to policy-holders and beneficiaries soared by almost 50 percent to $15.25 million, up from $10.4 million the year before.

Carma

Carma Developers Ltd. of Calgary has announced net income of $29.8 million or a record $2.65 a common share for the year 1979, up from 1978's total of $21.9 million, or $1.95 a share.

The Calgary-based real estate firm said in its annual report that total revenue for the year reached $142.5 million, compared to $104.6 million in 1978.

Company president Roy Wilson said higher interest rates in the latter part of the year and the prospect of further increases this year "are a cause of concern," adding the firm's sale residential lots may be curtailed as a result.

Denison

Denison Mines Ltd. had first-quarter profits of $16.352 million or 89 cents per share, up slightly from $15.14 million or 85 cents in the same period last year.

Denison said the increase was attributable "to higher net revenue from oil and gas, and a substantial increase in other income, which ... includes $6.2 million ... from the termination agreement with Reserve Oil and Gas Co. and Getty Oil Co.

"These improvements were partially offset by higher uranium production costs at Elliot Lake. In addition, despite higher uranium production, deliveries were slightly reduced."

Mutual funds

TORONTO (CP)—Recent prices of investment funds supplied by The Investment Funds Institute of Canada Tuesday. They are the net asset value per share or unit (NAVPS) last circulated by the fund in accordance with its pricing practice as contained in the prospectus of the fund. n—no sales charge, x — U.S. Fund, y — delayed NAVPS, xd—ex-dividend.

U.S. 'risks 30s-style depression'

OTTAWA (CP) - The United States is taking a surprisingly big chance with policies of tight money and high interest rates because it could lead to a 1930s-style depression, Walter Gordon, chairman of the Canadian Institute for Economic Policy, said Tuesday.

"A lot of people have been talking of the possibility of a depression and I'm surprised at the chance the U.S. is taking," the former finance minister said.

Gordon told a news conference he wants to see a drop in interest rates starting with one of at least two per cent "suddenly and all at once, not these uncertain changes every Thursday," the day the Bank of Canada announces changes in the weekly floating bank rate system it started March 10.

Movements in the bank rate largely act as a signal to the chartered banks to follow suit.

"The emphasis should be on the reduction of the interest rate," he said. "I would not be that concerned about what the net result was in the reduction of the value of the dollar" compared with the U.S dollar.

He said he's heard that some officials of the Bank of Canada say a two per cent drop in the bank rate would lead to a five-cent reduction in the dollar in U.S. terms — "it sounds about right."

But the harmful effects of the current high interest rate policy are too costly, he said. "By and large, I gather the economy is not growing at all and the unemployment rate is going up."

The institute's board of directors therefore believe the Bank of Canada policy is "disastrous."

And while he allowed that the Canadian policy must be influenced by the U.S. policy, "it's wrong to think there is nothing Canada can do alone."

In a statement by the institute's board of directors synthesizing three reports commissioned by the organization, Gordon said high interest rates slow economic growth and create hardships for small- and medium-size businesses and home owners. They also add to the cost of paying the country's debt to the world.

"On balance, we believe Canadians would be much better off with a lower value for the dollar and lower interest rates than with an 83-to-85-cent (U.S.) dollar and higher rates."

Gordon, who predicts some kind of incomes policy will be necessary because of concern over inflation — now forecast to rise 10 per cent this year — calls for a system of selective price controls.

The institute also recommends a new international agreement to restore order in setting currency and interest rates. In recent months, countries have competed with one another to get the benefits of higher interest rates.

Management blamed for Yukon rail woes

VANCOUVER (CP) — Incompetent management played a large part in the financial troubles of the White Pass and Yukon Corp., says a report by the Canadian Transport Commission.

The report, written by commission inquiry officers Keith Thompson and Edward Weinberg, said White Pass management ignored or failed to understand the damage that would be done to the company by the defection of a major shipper, Cassiar Asbestos Corp. of Vancouver.

The CTC ordered an inquiry into White Pass, which operates a rail, road and sea transportation service including a 180-kilometre narrow-gauge railway between Skagway, Alaska and Whitehorse, in October, 1979. The inquiry followed a request by White Pass for federal funds to keep the railway running.

White Pass first asked for financial aid in 1978 when Cassiar closed down its mine on the Yukon-Alaska border. Cassiar then switched shipments from its asbestos operation in northern B.C. from a mixed road-rail haul to Skagway, via White Pass, to Arrow Transportation Co. of North Vancouver. Arrow hauls by road from Cassiar's mine to Stewart for shipment by barge to Vancouver.

The closure of Cassiar's Yukon mine cost White Pass 100,000 tons of freight a year and the transfer of B.C. traffic to Arrow meant another 45,000 tons of business.

U.S prime at 19%

NEW YORK (UPI) — The interest rate for prime business loans was cut to 19 per cent from 19 ½ percent today by Chase Manhattan, third largest U.S. bank.

The last significant reduction in the prime occurred last Friday, when 10 important U.S. banks cut to 19 ½ per cent from a record 20 per cent.

The majority of banks keep their rate at 19 ½ percent, although Citibank of New York, the country's second largest, is at 19 ¾ percent.

Analysts said the Chase Manhattan cut was prompted by a sharp reduction in interest rates on Treasury issues in the past couple of weeks. Various government officials and economists have said recently they believed interest rates have peaked from record levels.

Thomson gets Newsco FP shares

TORONTO (CP) — Thomson Newspapers Ltd. announced Tuesday it has agreed to purchase $34 million in shares of FP Publications Ltd. from Newsco Investments Ltd.

Following completion of the purchase, Thomson will own all the equity shares of FP Publications and more than 76 per cent of the voting shares.

Newsco's shares of the newspaper and publishing group belong to R. Howard Webster of Montreal, who did not sell when Thomson outbid him for controlling interest of FP earlier this year.

Thomson also announced that FP agreed to sell 645,425 common shares of Ronalds-Federated Ltd. — a printing concern — to Newsco for $30 a share or about $19.3 million total.

The sale represents 51.6 per cent of Ronalds-Federated's outstanding shares.

Newsco intends to make application to the Ontario Securities Commission for an order exempting it from the requirement that it make an offer for the balance of the shares of Ronalds-Federated.

Teacher exchange program wanted

Four lower Vancouver Island school boards will be asked to ratify a teacher exchange program proposed by the Sooke Teachers Association.

Association president Roald Feness said exchanges between districts could start as early as next fall but he expects most interested teachers will apply for exchange starting in September, 1981.

Feness said a number of the southern island's 2,400 teachers live in one district and work in another, so there would be no real transportation problem for teachers who wanted to work for a year in another district while maintaining their normal place of residence.

Teacher association presidents, school superintendents and board chairmen from the four districts — Greater Victoria, Sooke, Saanich and Cowichan — met recently at a dinner organized by Feness to present the plan.

Feness suggested teachers could agree in advance to exchange roles then apply for temporary transfer or could join a list of others wishing to swap with any teacher of similar qualifications elsewhere in the lower island.

Feness said exchanges allow teachers to broaden their experience, work with colleagues with different philosophies and classes from different backgrounds.

"When I first started teaching you taught for one or two years in a district, and then would send out letters to a couple of other districts," Feness said.

"In five days you would get answers saying, yes, there are positions open, and you would flip a coin."

He said there would be no problem of pay or fringe benefits during a teacher's absence from his home district since these would carry on uninterrupted.

Parade boss calls for bands

The popular Victoria Day parade may disappear unless local bands come to the rescue, parade chairman Julian North said today.

"We have been relying upon American bands for too long. It is time our own people stopped sitting on their trumpets."

North said he was shocked that only one of the 17 district schools has entered a band in the May 19 parade.

Meanwhile, Anaheim, Calif., is ready to send three school bands. More than 30 U.S. groups want to participate in the parade.

It is folly to rely upon the visitors, North said, because with rising transportation costs we can expect fewer and fewer U.S. bands to be available.

"Our parade, which is one of the largest on this continent, will go down the drain unless our local bands start doing something to keep the tradition of our Victoria Day parade alive."

North said he is aware some people feel there are too many American bands in the parade.

"Everyone has talked about this but no one has done anything about it. This year we are going to try. We are doing everything we can to encourage local participation."

In past years some local bands didn't enter because they didn't qualify as marching bands or because the limit of 30 had been exceeded.

This year there is no limit and no restrictions.

He said local bands will be hard pressed to find an excuse for not participating.

"Even at this late date we hope more local groups will come forward. The deadline is Friday but we just close the door, we don't lock it."

North said he would like to see all local school bands enter the parade.

And if he is successful in getting them out on May 19, he would like to see them make a second trip down Douglas in a celebration to mark the end of school in June.

"We need an end-of-the term festival in Victoria. It could become another important local tradition."

North said he is concerned about the increasing amount of paint-smearing and noisey beach parties associated with graduation.

"We can understand the need to release pent-up emotions but it should be directed into constructive channels.

"I would like to see a big parade in June involving all the schools with floats and bands. There could be a good deal of friendly competition with Vic High trying to outdo Oak Bay, and so on.

"It could be a lot of fun. Afterwards, there could be a large dance at the arena or some other suitable location."

North said outdoor concerts by local bands should also be encouraged. There might be funding available from muncipalities and the provincial government for community events like that.

He said the provincial government should be showing more leadership in the field of local concerts in the provincial capital.

North said he would be pleased to spearhead an end-of-the-term celebration in Victoria if local schools show interest.

Meanwhile, there is the Victoria Day parade to complete.

There will be a May Queen contest again this year with 10 finalists seeking the title. The crowning will be held Sunday evening, May 18, followed by a fireworks display.

The Gorge Regatta will be held in Gorge Kinsmen park following the parade on May 19.

The V.I. Women's Aglow Fellowship will hold its Spring Retreat at Nanoose Bay Pentecostal Camp from June 6 to 8.

Speakers will be Claire Lasher and Esther Bennett.

Lasher, of Spokane, has served as worship chairman and counsellor for that city's fellowship.

She has a doctorate in French literature and has taught French at the Universities of Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

She has a BSc. from Seattle Pacific Collge and a doctorate from Homestead College.

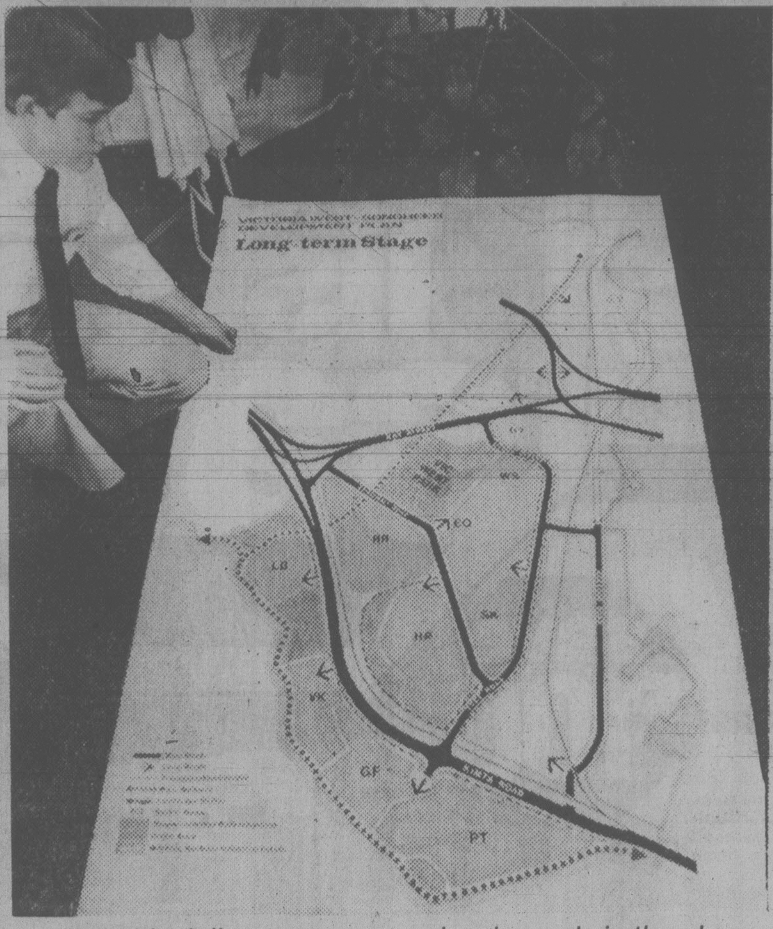
Park-topped oil tank farm in new city proposal

By NORMAN GIDNEY



Bold black lines are proposed main roads in the plan

An underground oil tank farm with a park on top, nearly 2,000 apartment and townhouse units and a relocated Esquimalt Road are part of the city's long term development plan for the Songhees industrial reserve in Victoria West.

The new wrinkle for the controversial tank farms — now located on provincial government property on the south side of the 150-acre planning area — was the surprise element of the plan.

Modern technology which fire chief Eric Simmons is looking into should allow the tanks to be buried in the ground, Ald. Bob Wright, chairman of council's land use committee, told a press conference Tuesday.

The tanks would be moved to the present location of Lime Bay shake mill at 199 Songhees Road, also property leased from the province. Lime Bay Shake Ltd.'s lease is up for renewal in 1982, as is the Chevron Canada Ltd. lease on land at 319 Harbor Road.

Shell Canada Ltd. tank farm at 60 Songhees and Gulf Oil Canada Ltd., located at 51 Songhees, have leases which run to 1987.

The province told the city last December that it was revising its land management policies for the area and wants the city's views on future plans for the area.

The city and the province have both said in the past that the oil tank farms and industries will have to move.

Wright said he hopes the oil companies will agree to move to the underground park before their leases expire, seeing that the city is making them an attractive proposal to relocate just next door.

The shake mill is built on fill, which wouldn't be suitable for major above-ground construction, so there could be a five-acre underground tank farm with green space fronting the harbor on top for public use, Wright said.

"They would be totally dyked so a plane could hit them and nothing would happen," the alderman said.

"If the oil people are interested, and my understanding is they are interested, then it would be up to them to deal with the province."

Another major change in the landscape of the blighted industrial area would be the realignment of Esquimalt Road. Instead of taking a sharp turn under the E & N tracks to get on or off the west end of the Johnson Street bridge, drivers would have a relatively clear path on a new access route.

The city's plan is to use Kimta Road. It would join the bridge across what is now Gordon's Towing impoundment lot at 50 Songhees Road, parallel the E & N tracks south of the right of way and rejoin Esquimalt Road several blocks farther west at Russel.

This section of Esquimalt Road would be closed to bridge traffic and serve only as a local street feeding the industrial area to the north.

The plan, which was put together during the last three months by city hall planners with the advisory planning commission providing a running critique, takes the area 20 years ahead.

Eventually, the city envisions a new residential community on both sides of the E & N tracks with up to 1,120 apartments and other dwellings housing approximately 1,800 people. No high rise buildings are contemplated, but there will be some multiple dwellings.

In addition, there is Henry Eng's 400 suite hotel on the old Sidney Roofing property facing downtown Victoria and a buffer zone between the hotel and the apartment zone farther west.

This will consist of a 240 suite apartment-hotel complex, to be built as a time-sharing condominium, something new to Victoria but common in places like Hawaiian and Mexican resorts.

There will also be a waterfront walkway extending from the Johnson Street bridge around to the existing pathway on the Vic West waterfront, and another pedestrian pathway extending up the length of Alston Street linking the south waterfront with Banfield Park on the upper Inner Harbor.

In the long term, the plan calls for relocation of the E & N switching yards to some undisclosed location, to be replaced possibly by a neighborhood shopping centre.

Wright said the city tried two years ago to get the parent CPR to co-operate with the CNR on a joint railyard on the harbor, but the city never heard back from the railway. The CNR has its yards on the west side of the harbor between the two bridges.

In 20 years there should also be another bridge across the harbor, twinning the Point Ellice bridge.

Wright said this will be a way of diverting through traffic around the congested downtown core. Now drivers come across the Johnson Street bridge and hit crowded city streets.

The high rocky parts of the Songhees zone on both sides of Esquimalt Road are to be reserved for residential use. The plan says a variety of housing types and densities will be encouraged in this area.

Land on the harbor north of Esquimalt Road and east of Tyee Road will remain an industrial area, part of the working harbor, Wright said.

This constitutes half of the 150-acre Songhees reserve — so-named for the Indian band which sold the property to the government around the turn of the century.

Except for realignment of the roads in this part, no major changes in land use are anticipated. It will continue to house sawmills, marine-based firms, manufacturing businesses and similar industries.

The first part of the plan to be implemented could be Eng's hotel, an Arthur Erickson design with 400 suites first unveiled nearly two years ago.

He is reported to be negotiating with the province over the terms of a lease on the government-owned property between the bridge and Songhees Point.

Eng owns the Warehouse chain of food stores and used to operate one on Songhees Road, on land leased by his Oakcrest Park Estates Ltd. That lease has seven years to run, but any major changes in land use have to be approved by the owner.

Is there more to Billy's death?

Full story wanted by grieving family

By PAUL MINVIELLE

On the morning of March 29 this year the body of 20-year-old William "Billy" John Jones was discovered face down in a Sidney creek just west of Canora Road south of Victoria International Airport.

Although Sidney RCMP police suspected foul play, the preliminary autopsy and their subsequent investigation convinced them that Jones, possibly under the influence of liquor or some other drug, simply fell down the creek bank and drowned.

Billy's mother, Pauline, and his stepfather, Gordy Olund

The RCMP went to great lengths to track down every possible lead in the case but say if anyone knows something that might shed light on Billy Jones' death, they want to hear about it.

Despite the official view that Jones met his death accidentally, his relatives and friends can't shake the feeling there's more to the case.

Christopher Considine, a lawyer asked by Billy's family to look into the case, said he is going to ask Coroner John Davidge for an inquest no matter what the tests show.

"It's certainly a very unusual death."

Two events have spawned a lot of doubt.

On April 2, Mrs. Pauline Olund, Billy's mother, encountered a youth in front of the Redi-Chef, a Sidney restaurant.

Mrs. Olund recalls him saying to her: "Mrs. Olund, I'm sorry about your son. Later you'll find out what really happened. He didn't just drown."

The youth's companion urged him to be quiet and leave. When the youth was later tracked down by police, he denied even knowing Mrs. Olund.

On April 3, Billy's employers, Dave and Echo Eburne, who operate Valentine Farms in North Saanich, were driving home from Billy's funeral, giving two men a ride.

One of them is a young man on probation who got to know Billy when he worked in the Eburnes' greenhouses.

"We were all kind of quiet," Mrs. Eburne said, then the young man spoke.

He said there were people who knew the true story of what happened to Billy, but they were afraid to come forward.

Mrs. Eburne says she phoned Sidney RCMP with the information but she didn't think they were too interested.

In fact, an officer was sent to question her further the next day.

Should the two incidents be labelled idle gossip? Or are there facts about Billy Jones' death that have not yet been revealed.

His grieving mother insists on knowing.

While an inquest would delve into the circumstances of Billy Jones' death, it wouldn't reveal the deep affection there was for Billy Jones.

Tribal elders speak highly of Billy and people from as far away as Michigan attended his funeral.

Billy's death was all the more poignant because, in the words of an employer: "He was a good kid, a real good kid. He had future plans."

No one, not even his mother, claims Billy was an angel but he was special to a lot of people and until all the rumors have been laid to rest, Mrs. Olund will wonder if her son really died the way the police believe he did.

What follows are the details of Billy's death so far as they are known, and some of the incidents that have made his family suspicious.

Billy's body was first spotted on an overcast Saturday morning by five youngsters hunting tadpoles in a North Saanich stream commonly called Duck Pond Creek, just south of the airport.

Sidney RCMP found Billy's body face down in eight inches of water, his knees drawn up under him.

There was a bruise to the right hand, but a mark on the forehead was in keeping with the body having laid face down for a time.

The body was clad in pants, a T-shirt and torn socks but no underwear.

As there was no identification on the body the RCMP asked Saanich Peninsula Indian bands to send representatives to Royal Jubilee Hospital for identification.

The word spread quickly and soon the phone in Pauline Olund's West Saanich Road home on the Tsecum Indian Reserve rang.

It was her aunt asking the whereabouts of Billy.

Mrs. Olund hadn't seen Billy since the evening of Thursday, March 27, two days before, when he left the Olund's home with a girlfriend.

"I started to worry right then," Mrs. Olund said. She phoned Billy's girlfriend.

As Mrs. Olund remembers the conversation, Billy's girlfriend said, "We had a little squabble and he left here." The girl told police later there was no squabble.

The girl didn't know where Billy was.

Some time later, Mrs. Olund saw David Bill, a band council member, drive up with the RCMP.

"I knew then it was my son."

Moments later, Constable Joe Brochez confirmed her worst fears.

As Mrs. Olund remembers the moment, she couldn't even talk. She heard Brochez say her son was found face down in the creek and the probable cause of death was asphyxiation by drowning.

"He said there were no bruises on the body. He said my son had no jacket, no shoes. He said it looked like Billy was going to relieve himself and fell forward into the creek."

When she learned her son had no underwear on, Mrs. Olund had the first inkling that perhaps the circumstances of her son's death didn't jibe with what she'd been told.

Echo Eburne

"He always wore shorts," she declared.

Gordy Olund, Bill's stepfather, agreed.

"If he didn't have a clean pair he'd come and borrow a pair of mine."

Police had to find out who Billy Jones was as he had no record. Was he involved in the drug subculture where those guilty of unpaid debts or suspected of snitching are killed unhesitatingly?

But as they questioned everyone involved in the party Billy attended the night of his death, as well as people who knew him well, police finally concluded Billy died accidentally.

Billy's relatives, friends and employers were convinced he would never use hard drugs or pills but he did drink on occasion and he admitted to one acquaintance to occasionally using marijuana.

So even if the toxicology report shows evidence of a drug in Billy's system, can it be determined if he took it voluntarily or even knowingly?

Consider Billy Jones' final hours at Valentine Farms.

"We hire a lot of kids and a lot of kids are in trouble," Mrs. Eburne said, explaining how she has come to know a lot about what young people in Sidney and North Saanich are doing.

To her, nothing about Billy's death makes sense.

She said Billy was enthused about his work and he had been promised a bonus for finishing a particular project on Friday, March 28.

"He was very proud of his work," she said.

On the afternoon of Thursday, March 27, Billy was paid a $50 advance on his wages. Before leaving he told the Eburnes he'd be in early Friday.

Mrs. Eburne never saw Billy again but her husband and the young worker drove into Sidney, where Billy cashed the $50 advance. He bought some cigarettes and some lunch.

Later, Billy drove up West Saanich Road on his bicycle to the Pat Bay store where he met his mother and sister, Meena, 10.

Billy gave his mother $10 to help pay for the groceries and he carried two of the bags of food home on his bike.

At home he changed his clothes and he was resting on the sofa when his girlfriend arrived. She said she wanted Billy to install a stereo set in her car at her place.

"She said she was going to bring him right back home," Mrs. Olund said.

She reminded Billy he hadn't yet eaten.

She was never to see her son again.

At the girlfriend's house north of the airfield a party developed.

Details of the party are sketchy, but police were told Billy drank heavily.

(Throughout this Times inquiry there were suggestions Billy visited the Sidney Hotel the night of his death. In every instance, police learned the witnesses were confused about the actual date.)

When the party got too rowdy, Billy's girlfriend's father came downstairs and ordered everyone out.

Billy left with two Victoria men, Ian Ramage of 3068 Abina, and Brian Offer of 220 Moss.

Offer was driving.

The next moments were fateful for Billy. Ramage and Offer didn't know where he lived and they say Billy was unable to give proper directions.

They should have turned right when they reached the end of the road where the party was. That would have led them into Mills Road and toward the Olund home.

Instead, they turned left and drove to the Pat Bay Highway at Beacon Avenue and turned south.

The two men said Billy told them to take the next right, which was Weiler Avenue. This brought them to a subdivision west of the highway where they spent several minutes driving into dead-end streets.

They had just turned onto Canora Road and were opposite Mary's Coffee Bar when the car stalled.

Rammage and Offer got out, lifted the hood and for the next little while they attempted to get the car running again.

It was at this time that Billy got out and headed for the the field west of Canora.

The two men say they told Billy to stay in the car but he ignored them. They didn't go after him as they were trying to start the car.

They pushed the car to Clair Downey's Chevron service station at 9429 Canora, left a note saying they'd be back the next day and returned to where the car had stalled.

Billy was gone.

Offer said he went into the field opposite the coffee bar and yelled for Billy. There was no response.

The two men assumed Billy lived in the area and had simply gone home.

They insist they heard no cries for help or anything else that might have indicated something amiss.

They walked back to the highway, made their way to the Golden Bear pub and called for a cab for the trip back to Victoria.

That was the end of it for them.

Daily bus passes planned by June 9

The plan — initially only covering the four core municipalities — was recommended Tuesday to the Capital Regional Board by its transit planning and management committee.

Dennis Grimmer, the Urban Transit Authority's regional director, told the committee adults would pay $1.25, representing the price of a round trip plus a 25-cent premium. Students would pay 60 cents, price of a round trip plus a 10-cent premium. Senior citizens and children would be charged 35 cents, this reprsenting a five-cent premium.

Money for the passes would be collected in bus fare boxes.

Grimmer said promotion of the passes would first be aimed at people who already take the bus at least twice a day.

"These people could be encouraged with the purchase of a daily pass to take the bus downtown shopping during their lunch hour or to use the bus in the evenings for shopping, recreation or a show," Grimmer said.

He said a campaign will be mounted to reach tourists by providing information at tourist information outlets, hotels, motels, restaurants and camping areas.

He said the campaign will also be geared toward people who do not now use the bus.

CRD executive director Dennis Young warned there could be a fairly significant shortfall until bus use is substantially increased.

Replying to a question by board chairman Jim Campbell, Grimmer said weekly passes will be considered later.

Sooke director Don Rittaler told the committee Sooke residents were not warned that the previous service of carrying packages aboard buses would be cancelled April 1 when the CRD took over.

"We are paying an increased cost to get reduced service," he said.

Campbell agreed, saying: "We run into this kind of trouble every time a government takes over something which has been run by private interests."

Committee chairman Norma Sealey explained the system is acquiring new urban-type buses that don't have freight compartments. In addition, the system has integrated the exisiting urban buses, which do not have freight compartments, with the buses that can carry freight. It is now impossible, she said, to predict whether a certain bus can carry freight.

"My understanding is that this was looked at carefully and it was felt it was not practical for us to be in the cartage business. We are in the transit business, not cartage, and I understand that private enterprise is moving in to fill the gap," she said.

Ask the Times

Q. Can you tell me who came up with the Drive Defensively and Beautiful B.C. slogans used by the motor-vehicle branch? R.M.B.

A. Neither slogan can be traced to a single person. Drive Defensively came to be used on motor-vehicle branch material in the 1960s when the concept of defensive driving first became prominent. A spokesman for the branch said it's believed the slogan was taken from promotion of a similar concept in the United States.

Beautiful British Columbia is also difficult to trace. It came into official use when the tourist magazine of the same name was first published in the summer of 1959.

Driver's reading hit .40

Police think they know why.

"The average person would have been in a coma," a spokesman said.

Police said the man — he is to appear in court on an impaired driving charge — drove only three blocks but in that time:

— Got going again and swiped a third pole at Douglas and Kings.

— And as a finale, crashed into a parked car in front of 2631 Douglas.

That vehicle then lurched into another parked car.

At that point, the man's car expired.

Police estimate total damage at $3,500.

Three-day exhibition set to inform public on centre

The Provincial Capital Commission has agreed to stage an information exhibit in the McPherson Theatre next month for Victorians to learn about the waterfront convention centre, Mayor Bill Tindall said today.

It's a major concession to the foes of the $8 million centre, who have been calling for more public participation in its planning.

The mayor said the model of the centre by architect Paul Merrick as well as Arthur Erickson's 1973 plans and model of the Inner Harbor would be placed in the theatre foyer May 12, 13 and 14. Times are to be announced.

Merrick and George Giles, chief executive officer of the commission, which is building the convention centre with provincial government funds, will be on hand to answer questions, the mayor said.

"Also available at the exhibit will be question/opinion forms so citizens will be able to express their views of the convention trade centre proposal in writing," the mayor's statement said.

The convention centre has been plagued with controversy since the PCC — Tindall is one of Victoria's representatives — unveiled Merrick's design earlier this month to Victoria city council.

Ald. Robin Blencoe and former mayor Peter Pollen have led opponents of the trade centre at the 2½-acre site at Wharf and Fort. There has been a public petition circulating to have the centre moved from the prime waterfront location.

Meanwhile, there are reports the non-profit group of downtown businessmen which has been the main force behind the convention centre is about to disband.

The Pan-Pacific Conference and Trade Centre Society was incorporated as a non-profit society a year ago to operate and manage the convention centre. It has worked closely with the PCC on the details of the planning.

Blencoe has criticized Pan Pacific as a powerful clique of powerful businessmen exerting undue influence on the city and the provincial government.

However, Pan-Pacific secretary John Ansell of CJVI radio station denied the reports. He said the only changes contemplated in the society will be to add four civic and provincial government representatives to the centre's management body. Five of the eight original directors of the society would remain.

Another development was an announcement by Ald. Ron McKenzie that he will hold a press conference to release a mass of documentation on the convention centre negotiations that will expose some inconsistencies in Blencoe's stand.

Attempted theft of own car charged

A 21-year-old woman has been charged with trying to steal her own car from the compound of a towing firm early Tuesday morning.

Cathy Marie Mullins, 1732 Newton, appeared in provincial court before Judge Blake Allan who released her on her own undertaking to appear next Tuesday to plead to an attempted theft charge.

Victoria police said the woman's car was towed from the Royal Olympic Hotel parking lot about 2:01 a.m. and taken to Gordon's Towing Ltd. lot on Songhees Road.

Police received a call from the firm 20 minutes later reporting a woman trying to remove her car without paying the $16 fee.

Officers advised her on the procedure to dispute tow charges, but the woman got into her vehicle and drove up to the closed gate. Police then arrested her and took her to the police station.

After the woman told police she would, if released, return to the compound to retrieve her vehicle and not pay the $16 charges, she was placed in a cell until her court appearance later in the morning.

Crown counsel Don Laughton indicated the prosecution will be alleging the towing firm legally had the right to have temporary custody of her vehicle.

Speed of the Pats scorches the Cats

ERNIE FEDORUK

Victoria Cougars' defence was supposed to have an edge over Regina Pats' defenders but the pre-series measurements neglected to determine the importance of the speed of the forwards they were to face in the Western Hockey League's championship round.

The damaging speed was with Regina's attackers.

They burned Victoria's defencemen for two goals on the outside and two down the middle and opened the best-of-seven series with a 6-4 victory before 4,181 fans Tuesday at Memorial Arena.

The fire occurred despite the fact the Eastern Division champion were without Brian Varga, one of the Pats' fastest skaters, and that an ailing Darren Bobyck was able to motor, not too effectively, for only two periods.

Stricken with a stomach ailment, Bobyck's three best rushes were off the bench and into the dressing room biffy. Finally, he took his leave after the second period.

That still left Regina with the likes of Darren Veitch, Mike Blaisdell, Doug Wickenheiser, Ron Flockhart and Darren Galley, the goal-providers.

But for the opener, it wasn't a case of "who." Rather, it was "how."

With speed.

That made it a dismal night for a Victoria defence and goaltender Kevin Eastman.

Example two: Victoria forward Daryl Coldwell's poorly-directed pass wound up on the stick of Blaisdell, standing inside the Regina blueline between Robinson and Bob McGill. Both Victoria defencemen took up the chase but the race was over by time Blaisdell hit the Victoria blueline.

Example three: Flockhart, foiled twice earlier, broke a 4-4 tie at 12:34 of the third period with a burst of speed that victimized McGill.

Example four: Galley scored the insurance goal at 16:49 with an outside sprint past Dawes.

It was not a good night for Cougar rearguards and the frustration was obvious when Robert Jacobson took a needless slashing penalty at the 17:21 mark, virtually erasing any hope of a Victoria comeback in the final 2½ minutes.

The sputtering on defence nullified a reasonable Victoria showing on attack. The Cougars, who came out smoking in the first 10 minutes, generally carried the play to the Pats and out-shot Regina 42-29. The early 2-0 lead was provided by Bob Smith and Brad Palmer. Regina came back to tie it but Victoria again went up by two on scoring efforts by Greg Adams and Grant Rezansoff.

Thereafter, however, it was Regina's show as Pats scored the final four goals of the game.

Eastman, often a sitting duck, managed one big save early but had no answer for the telling Regina breakaways in the final half of the game. Regina netminder Bart Hunter, on the other hand, appeared to miscue on the game's opening goal, by Smith, but settled down and turned in an excellent job when the Pats need it.

Regina coach Brian Murray felt Pats' second-half turnabout was a tribute to his team's conditioning.

"They really worked hard in the last half of the season," he said. "It paid off in Medicine Hat on Saturday (in a series-clinching 6-3 victory over the Tigers) when we trailed 3-2 after two periods but scored four goals in the third."

Teams meet again tonight at 8. If Cougars rebound, a third game will be played in Memorial Arena on Thursday with the series then moving to Regina for three games.

Legs run out on Bruins; Islanders, Flyers are in

By The Canadian Press

New York Islanders and Philadelphia Flyers completed some unfinished business Tuesday night, while Montreal Canadiens got back to business as usual.

The Islanders, on third-period goals from Duane Sutter, Clark Gillies and Denis Potvin, defeated Boston Bruins 4-2 to win their National Hockey League quarter-final series 4-1.

New York had won the first three games of the best-of-seven Stanley Cup series but dropped an overtime decision to the Bruins on Monday night.

The same formula held true for the Flyers, who won the first three games of their series with New York Rangers, lost the fourth game but ended the series with a 3-1 victory Tuesday night.

Meanwhile, the Canadiens, who have won the Stanley Cup the last four years, continued their comebadck after dropping the first two games of their series against Minnesota. They beat the North Stars 6-2 Tuesday night to take a 3-2 lead in the series.

Steve Shutt got three goals as Montreal moved to within one victory of a semi-final berth.

Montreal will try to finish off the North Stars on Thursday night in Minnesota. If the Canadiens lose, the seventh and deciding game would be played Sunday night in Montreal.

Buffalo Sabres were the first team to reach the semi-finals, completing a four-game sweep Sunday night of Chicago Black Hawks.

Gillies took a pass from Butch Goring and scored on a 15-footer from the slot with 5:58 gone in the third period to break a 2-2 tie for the Islanders. Potvin added an insurance goal at 14:27 on a pass from Mike Bossy.

The Islanders had fallen behind 2-0 but drew even in the second period when they outshot the Bruins 15-8 and got a goal from defenceman Stefan Persson. Sutter tied the score at 2:38 of the third period.

"We wanted to put as many shots on goal as we could in the second and third periods from anywhere," Arbour said. "They had to be tired. Look at how many games they've played."

The Bruins, who got first-period goals from Peter McNab and Wayne Cashman, were playing in their 10th playoff game in 15 days — and it finally took its toll.

"We had all the heart in the world, especially in the last two periods, but we didn't have too many legs," said Bruins coach Harry Sinden. "We were one step slow for the last two periods."

Al Hill's goal from 10 feet in the final minute of the first period started the Flyers on their way. The play was set up by a backhand pass from the middle of the left faceoff circle by Mel Bridgman as Rangers defencemen Barry Beck and Ron Greschner converged on the Flyers' centre.

Bridgman sets up the Flyers' second goal at 5:09 of the second period, winning a faceoff from New York's Phil Esposito and sliding the puck to Gary Morrison, who fed it to Behn Wilson for a 40-footer.

"On the first goal I was lucky," Bridgman said. "I lost the puck and it bounced back to me.

"On the second, Phil (Esposito) had been beating me on the faceoff by drawing the puck back to his defensemen. I moved (Gary) Morrison to the corner and got the puck to where he threw it back to the point and Behn (Wilson) put it in."

The Flyers made it 3-0 on a shot from about 15 feet in front of the net by Paul Holmgren. Ron Duguay of New York foiled Pete Peeters's shutout bid at 14:27 of the third period.

Steve Shutt scored three goals on assists from linemate Mark Napier as Montreal routed Minnesota. Michel Larocque, who took over in goal for the Canadiens in the third game, stopped 29 shots in his first playoff start at the Montreal Forum since 1974.

Mainlanders predict tough time for Irish

It's less than a week to the opening of another Western Lacrosse Association season and already the defending Mann Cup champions Victoria Shamrocks are in trouble. In deep trouble, that is, if you believe all the noise coming from the mainland.

Coquitlam Adanacs, runners-up the last two years, and beaten by the Shamrocks in both those finals, are openly predicting they can take it all. New Westminster Salmonbellies, who got away to such a great start in '79, only to falter at the wire, are equally optimistic that this is their year; while Vancouver Burrards, the 1977 Mann Cup champions, who had such a miserable season last year, feel they are on the way back and don't have too far to come.

Only Nanaimo Timbermen, who have at least two new additions from Eastern Canada, plus most of what they had last season, aren't given much of a chance in what looms as a four-team fight.

First to the Adanacs. "Close" has been the right word for them the last two seasons. And on the plus side for this season to go with a well-balanced young squad (coach Bob Salt has had 25 players out to practice this spring) are the additions of Mike Reelie, Rico Bellusci and Kevin Parsons. Reelie is the top junior grad, was a standout with the Adanacs in the playoffs last year and should be that much better as a regular. Bellusci, a former Burrard, didn't play last year and was acquired in a trade. He has a fine shot and is particularly adept on the power play. Parsons is a veteran who sat out last season with an injured leg.

On the minus side, the A's have lost a smart veteran and the seventh leading scorer in the WLA last year, Dave Durante.

Durante was traded to the Salmonbellies in the off-season and he is part of the reason for renewed optimism in the Salmonbelly camp. The Salmonbellies, who didn't miss by much in '79, also have a bright new goalkeeper in Rod Banister, the Western Canada Junior League's top netminder with Burnaby for the past three years. Coach Al Lewthwaite can also point to the fact that last year 13 of his players were in the 21-22 age bracket and, as there is no substitute for experience, why shouldn't there be improvement? For depth there's always the incomparable (if a year older) Wayne Goss and the Tasker brothers, Brian and Bob. Their talents are well documented.

Burrards, who obviously had problems at the top in '79, will no doubt be the same tough veteran club they were two seasons ago. Reasoning is simple enough. Mike Smith, who played only 13 games last year, and Dave Tasker, who saw action in just two, will be back. So will big Doug Hayes, Ron Pinder, Pat Ryan and goalkeeper Dave Evans. Burrards also have a flock of potentially good second-year players in Mike Holden, Dan Perrault, Terry Bingley, Mike McMillan and Stu Aird, plus top draft choice John Swan and Paul Cioci, a high scorer who previously had experience in the National Lacrosse Association with Syracuse and Quebec. Coach is Bill Bradley, Blair Dallin the new manager.

Nanaimo is the problem child. The Timbermen, who finished as trailers last season, are again under the guidance of coach Larry McNabb. They will have a solid base but may lack depth, which was their undoing last year. The goalkeeping is in good hands with Mac Maude, the second-team all star, returning, while the multi-talented Brian Evans, past WLA scoring champion, assist leader, et al, will carry much of the load up front. Word also is that ex-Shamrock Ron MacNeil will return for another season and that will give the T-Men a terrific one-two scoring punch. In Doug Angrove they also have a solid player who is one of the top penalty killers in the league, and in Ted Greaves and Ron Browne they have two promising newcomers from Eastern Canada.

In addition, veteran Charn Dhillon is expected to return and, if the two players recently traded to the T-Men by the Shamrocks, John Entzminger and Gerry Kustaski, can be persuaded to turn out, the Nanaimo fortunes would be much better served. But at the moment that doesn't appear likely as Kustaski and Entzminger are earmarked for senior B play.

Importance of an good start this year, in a shortened and balanced schedule of 24 games, is emphasized by the fact that the leading club on June 21 will represent Canada West in the All-Nations Tournament here and in Vancouver in July.

The Shamrocks? Their assessment will come later.

Steamrollers are stirring

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — The National Basketball Association could be forced to welcome the long-dormant Providence Steamrollers to its ranks under a suit filed Tuesday in U.S. district court.

Robert (Skip) Chernov purchased the franchise from the estate of the late Louis Pieri, who shelved the Steamrollers after they stumbled to a 3-49 record in the 1948-49 season with the old Basketball Association of America. Pieri died in 1969.

Chernov, a former rock concert promoter who waged a feeble challenge to Providence Mayor Vincent A. Cianci Jr. in 1978, contends an NBA bylaw allows the team to be reactivated at any time without the blessing of league authorities.

He said winning the case could force the NBA to include the Steamrollers in its 1980-81 schedule and give him the right to participate in the June 10 college draft. He also contends the Steamrollers would have rights to the No. 1 college pick on the basis of its poor record in its last active season.

NBA general counsel David J. Stern scoffs at the argument.

"We don't have a franchise in Providence and we don't plan to 'reactivate' one soon," said Stern from NBA headquarters in New York City.

He said the bylaw cited by Chernov allows team owners only a one-year grace period before the franchise lapses.

The federal court will have to decide whether the bylaw is open-ended, as Chernov contends, or limited, as Stern insists.

Kenneth O'Donnell, one of Chernov's Providence lawyers, said he can prove the franchise still exists.

"We have copies of the Aug. 11, 1949, meeting of the board of directors, which puts this franchise on an inactive status and provides for it to be reactivated," O'Donnell said. "There is no evidence that the franchise was in any way, shape or form forfeited."

Those dramatic finishes nothing new to Sonics

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After Seattle SuperSonics edged Los Angeles Lakers 108-107 on a free throw by Jack Sikma with two seconds left Tuesday night, Sonics coach Lenny Wilkens shrugged his shoulders and said with a trace of a smile — "We've been here before."

The dramatic end to a game that had been close all the way was nothing new for the Sonics, who had just finished a gruelling seven-game National Basketball Association playoff series with Milwaukee Bucks on Sunday.

Seattle was expected to be tired, opening the Western Conference championship series against the rested Lakers, but the Sonics again found a way to win.

"Sure we were tired," said Wilkens, "But we recovered.

"I didn't think we would be as tired as everybody else seemed to think. We kept our poise at the end of the game, and I just feel very good about it."

Reserve guard Fred Brown, deadly accurate with his floating jumpers from outside, scored 34 points for Seattle including eight of the Sonics' nine points in the final three minutes. Gus Williams added 28 for the winners, who eliminated the Lakers from the Western Conference playoffs the last two years. Sikma scored 11.

"When Fred's got his rhythm, he's a fabulous pure shooter," said Wilkens. "He also played a smart game, used the screen very well."

One of the keys to the Sonics' victory over the Lakers, who were coming off a layoff of a week, was the ability to shut off Los Angeles centre Kareem Abdul-Jabbar in the final quarter. Well-covered by Sonic defenders, he did not get off a single shot in the final period.

"Seattle did a good job of jamming up the middle," said Lakers coach Paul Westhead. "We had no success getting the ball into Kareem."

Abdul-Jabbar paced Los Angeles with 26 points. Earvin (Magic) Johnson had 19 and Jamaal Wilkes 18 points.

With the score tied 107-107, there was some confusion in the final seconds as Wilkes missed a shot from the corner. Sikma got his fingertips on the rebound momentarily, Abdul-Jabbar grabbed the ball and missed a lay-in as the buzzer sounded. But the referee ruled that Los Angeles guard Norm Nixon had fouled Sikma on the play, so the Seattle centre was sent to the free throw line and the clock was reset at two seconds.

Sikma hit the first of two free throws. The Lakers had a last chance, but Wilkes missed another jumper from the corner as time expired.

The loss was only the second in their last 30 home games for the Lakers.

The second game of the best-of-seven, semi-final series is scheduled for here tonight.

Canucks study ticket hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — National Hockey League fans may pay as much as $2 a ticket more next season to watch Vancouver Canucks play at the Pacific Coliseum.

General manager Jake Milford says team officials are considering the across-the-board increases to meet escalating operational costs.

"We have to study the whole picture, but our rising expenses indicate that ticket prices may have to go up, like everything else these days, for the first time in several years," Milford said Monday.

Season ticket holders have paid $10, $8 and $5 a ticket for Vancouver home games since the 1975-76 season, with costs for single-game tickets of $12, $10 and $7. Standing room tickets are $4.

The Canucks, a subsiduary of Northwest Sports Enterprises Ltd., in the 1979-80 season sold an average of 14,585 tickets to 40 regular-season games. Seating capacity at the Coliseum is 15,613. The team had nine sellouts, including 800 standees.

Milford said the devalued Canadian dollar hurt the Canucks because many of the players have contracts signed in the U.S. and are paid in American dollars.

"We, of course, travel extensively in the U.S., which costs us considerably in the dollar exchange," he said, "and we need U.S. funds to operate our farm team in Dallas.

"The salaries alone in Dallas cost us more than $100,000 extra."

Dallas Hawks played in the Central Hockey League last season and finished seventh, missing the playoffs.

Many of the players now on the Vancouver roster were acquired in trades with teams situated in the U.S.

Sports tonight

Oak Bay Barbarians face Mt. Douglas Mountainmen in a battle for the Howard Russell Cup and the Greater Victoria high school rugby title at 5 in Royal Athletic Park.

Stores to get more from licence sales

Some rambling notes along the trail:

The Fish and Wildlife Branch has decided to give more money to department and sporting good stores for selling hunting and fishing licences.

Instead of a five per cent commission, which has been in effect for the past 40 years, the stores will now collect 10 per cent.

Unfortunately for the Island stores which boycotted sale of licences — including four in Victoria — the new commission will be applied retroactively to Apr. 1. The outlets which continued to sell licences will benefit most from the new arrangement.

But two burning questions remain on this whole episode.

Will licence fees be raised next year to compensate for the shortfall in revenue?

Or, since licence fees supply a good percentage of the rather sad budget allocated to the branch, will the government opt to take more money out of general revenue to make up the difference.

In addition to the four boycotting stores, this writer found several have gone out of the business of selling licences in the past couple of years.

I finally managed to renew my fishing licence on the fifth try.

Speaking about fishing . . .

Steelhead fishermen picked at random from throughout the province will soon receive questionnaires from the branch. Answers to the questions will help fisheries managers plan future programs.

Last year's questionnaire revealed 15,800 steelheaders in the province spent approximately 159,500 hours angling for these fiesty sea-run rainbows. About 6,700 managed to catch 39,500 steelhead. Of those, about 14,700 were kept and the remaining 24,800 were released.

So if you get a questionnaire, fill it out and mail it as soon as possible.

Rocks top Legion

Victoria Shamrocks of the Western Lacrosse Association earned a 13-8 decision over Esquimalt Legion of the Western Canada League and their own goaltenders in an exhibition game Tuesday night at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

To make things little more even, the two teams traded goalies for the game.

Kevin Alexander set the pace for Rocks with four goals, double tallies were added by Tej Labh and Jim Boyd and singles were contributed by Jeevan Dillon, Chris Hall, Dave Thomson, Jim Lynch and Bill Marechek.

Jim Lightbody (2), Mike Thomas, Gord Redlin, Dave Angrove, Gord Taylor, Bruce Alexander and Terry Jay counted for Legion.

Blanks in memorable start as Braves demote Horner

By The Canadian Press

Larvell Blanks, new third baseman for the Atlanta Braves, regards his baseball job realistically.

Blanks made his first start of the season a noteworthy one Tuesday, replacing a bewildered Bob Horner, who was sent down to the minors the day before.

Horner was the 1978 National League rookie of the year and the club's leading hitter last year, batting .314 with 33 home runs, but he got off to a 2-for-34 start at the plate this year with seven errors.

The job fell to Blanks when the Braves demoted Horner, who responded by saying — "This is incredible. It's beyond incredible.". He later announced that he will refuse to report.

Blanks, meanwhile, responded with a leadoff home run in the bottom of the 10th inning, giving Atlanta only its second win in 11 games, a 3-2 decision over San Diego Padres.

Blanks said the farthest thing from his mind was a home run.

"They always surprise me, to be honest with you," said Blanks, who hit only one home run last year with Texas Rangers. "I don't try to be a long-ball hitter.

And how long can he hold onto his new job?

"Probably for the next 10 days," he said. That's the amount of time Horner must spend in the minors, if he reports.

For Blanks, it was his first hit and run batted in of the season.

Phil Niekro went nine innings for Atlanta, yielding just four hits and striking out eight. Al Hrabosky got the win in relief.

Elsewhere in the National League, Pittsburgh Pirates downed Montreal Expos 5-3, Chicago Cubs defeated St. Louis Cardinals 16-12, Philadelphia Phillies whipped New York Mets 14-8, Houston Astros blanked Cincinnati Reds 8-0 and Los Angeles Dodgers shut out San Francisco Giants 6-0.

Unlikely Mike Easler provided Pittsburgh's power over Montreal with a pair of home runs. Easler, who has hit only four homers in the previous 118 games of his major league career, hit a three-run shot in the first and added a solo homer in the fifth.

Jim Bibby, 2-0, carried a three-hit shutout into the seventh when the Expos rallied for three runs, highlighted by Warren Cromartie's two-run single.

In the American League, Seattle Mariners ended Oakland's seven-game winning streak by defeating the A's 5-4, California Angels dropped their fifth game in a row, an 8-1 loss to Minnesota Twins, Kansas City Royals downed Toronto Blue Jays 7-2, New York Yankees nipped Baltimore Orioles 5-4, Milwaukee Brewers clubbed Cleveland Indians 8-4 and Detroit Tigers blanked Texas Rangers and Chicago White Sox shut out Boston Red Sox by identical 2-0 scores.

Bill Stein's two-run homer in the bottom of the eighth inning lifted Seattle over Oakland. Stein connected off Brian Kingman after a walk to Bruce Bochte, who also homered for the Mariners — as did Jim Anderson. The homers enabled Rick Honeycutt to raise his record to 3-0 with help from Byron McLaughlin in the ninth.

Oaks favored to collect Cup

Seldom has a team been such an outright favorite to win the Howard Russell Cup.

That's the position in which Oak Bay finds itself today after breezing through a season of Greater Victoria High School Rugby League matches undefeated.

The Howard Russell — the league's playoff trophy — is up for grabs in the final at 5 p.m. today in Royal Athletic Park. The Barbarians appear to be such a shoo-in that they may treat it as just other game.

But Oak Bay coach Gary Johnston said earlier today his team couldn't afford to take their cup final opponents — Mt. Douglas Mountainmen — too lightly.

"We've only played them once this season and that was in our very first game," he explained. "We beat them but the score was only 15-9."

The difference between the two sides in that game, however, was more considerable than the score indicated as Oak Bay scored three tries while Mt. Doug couldn't cross the opposing line and counted its points on three penalty goals.

"Still, the Mountainmen have been playing much better recently and they did beat Claremont in the semi-finals," Johnston pointed out.

Four from Hornets get scholarships

Four players from Saanich Hornets have been granted football scholarships to Simon Fraser University.

All of the four — defensive back Russ Hafer, linebacker Jim Bateman, defensive tackle Dennis Arter and running back Tom Graham — were coached by Roy Vollinger from the junior bantam through juvenile levels and are considered by SFU Clansmen coach Rod Woodward to be among the best in British Columbia at their positions.

Year of togetherness

The Vancouver Island Track Racing Association (VITRA), which earlier this year came to an agreement with Western Speedway management following a year of infighting, has now agreed to amalgamation with the Capital City Auto Racers (CCAR).

Both groups are meeting tonight to conclude merger arrangements.

Larry Pollard, who organized CCAR after VITRA decided to race out of Nanaimo, will join the VITRA executive under president Bill Price.

Lansdowne, sparked by a strong showing in the junior doubles competition, captured the Greater Victoria junior high school badminton championship Tuesday.

Arlene Griffiths and Jill Hobson downed Heather Blythe and Alice Ngain in the all-Lansdowne girls' doubles final; Gregg Reynolds and Doug Millward topped the boys' doubles and Griffith and Reynolds placed second in the mixed doubles event.

Dale Willard and Julie Irving of defending-champion Colquitz, which finished second in the over-all standings, and Bob Ballinger of Cedar Hill came up with outstanding individual performances.

Willard won the junior boys' singles crown and partnered Andrea Kluge to victory in the mixed doubles. Irving won the midget girls' singles championship and combined with Greg Weins for a win in the mixed doubles while Ballinger won the intermediate boys' singles and teammed up with Brenda Stajduhar to win the mixed doubles title.

Rosie - where were you?

NEW YORK (AP) — Whether Rosie Ruiz completed the entire Boston Marathon — or the 1979 New York Marathon, for that matter — she has already affected the way the race will be handled in 1981.

"We'll change things for next year," race director Will Cloney said Tuesday. "We will have separate officials for the women."

Cloney added that such judging was already in effect "in a way" Monday when Ruiz, a New York office worker, apparently won the Boston race in record time for a woman — two hours, 31 minutes, 56 seconds.

But in doing so, she raised doubts of officials, runners and witnesses who said they did not see her until the end. Ruiz, 26, remained out of touch Tuesday night after earlier repeating a denial that cheating occurred.

"A number of TV stations and running magazines had people checking the women," Cloney said. "None of them came up with this girl. The crowd is sophisticated enough, too, to keep track of the women. You can hear the surge of the crowd as they sight the lead runner. This time there was no surge."

He said the Boston Athletic Association, which sponsors the Boston Marathon, was investigating the matter "47 different ways" and hoped to make a determination early next week.

Also stirring the controversy were New York Marathon officials, who planned to review films of the 1979 race to see if Ruiz really placed 23rd among women in what she called her first try at the marathon.

Adding doubt about that race was Susan Morrow, a Manhattan photographer and freelance clothing designer, who said she rode with Ruiz on the subway to the finish of the October, 1979 race.

"It's absolutely the same woman; there's no question," Morrow said.

Morrow recalled that she saw Ruiz at the West Fourth Street station and inquired about the woman's running clothes. Ruiz said she had turned an ankle around the 10-mile mark, Morrow said, and they rode to Columbus Circle before walking to the finish area.

"She was leaning on me," Morrow recalled. "They just let us through all these barricades. She just walked up to someone and I guess said, 'I'm a runner and I'm hurt.' "

Meanwhile, Jack Emptage, Ruiz's boss, said there was talk of a defamation-of-character lawsuit.

"It's up to Miss Ruiz and her lawyers," he said.

Should Ruiz be disqualified, Jaqueline Gareau of Montreal would become the winner. Gareau, 27, who finished in a time of 2:34.26, said she didn't see Ruiz. Gareau said she asked a television crew at the half-way mark about her position.

"The girl on the platform told me I was first," she said. "I did not see Ruiz pass me and I was surprised when I arrived at the finish line to see her with the winner's laurels."

BLACKPOOL, England (AFP) — Sharon Davies, 17, established a Commonwealth swimming record for the women's 200-metre individual medley Sunday with a time of two minutes, 17.31 seconds.

Clements jumps to Chiefs in NFL bid

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (CP) — Tom Clements may not be patterning his football career after that of Joe Theismann, but the similarities continue to grow.

Clements, who fell heir to the starting quarterback job at the University of Notre Dame when Theismann graduated and then followed his predecessor to the Canadian Football League, joined Theismann as a member of the National Football League's signal-calling fraternity Tuesday when he signed a series of five one-year contracts with Kansas City Chiefs.

"At the end of last year I thought I wanted to stay in Canada," Clements said from Lansing, Mich., where he is attending law school. "But the more I thought about it, the more I thought I would try the National Football League and see what happened.

Clements, who, like Theismann, figured prominently in Heismann Trophy balloting for the outstanding collegiate football player in the U.S., signed with Ottawa Rough Riders of the CFL in 1975.

He led the Rough Riders to the Grey Cup title in 1976, but, having let it be known he would play out his option in 1979, was traded, prior to last season, to Saskatchewan Roughriders.

With the Roughriders going no where at mid-season, Clements, 29, was pedalled to Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

And, like Theismann, money was not the prime motive in jumping to the NFL.

"I thought it would be nice playing in the U.S. It was nice playing in Canada, but I grew up watching the NFL and when the opportunity presented itself, I wanted to take advantage of it."

While details of the pact with Kansas City were not announced, Hamilton had offered Clements a five-year, $1.25 million contract to remain with the CFL club. It is believed Clements signed for less with the Chiefs.

That was also the case when Theismann, now 30, decided to try his hand in the NFL in 1974 after three seasons with Toronto Argonauts. He played out his option after a running feud with Argos general manager John Barrow and, despite considerable interest expressed by Montreal Alouettes, headed south and an estimated $100,000 from Washington Redskins.

Theismann and Clements were both standouts during their collegiate careers, gaining all-American recognition. Theismann finished second to Jim Plunkett in the Heismann balloting in 1970, while Clements was fourth in the '74 voting.

Chiefs' coach Marv Levy knows plenty about Clements, having coached at Montreal prior to joining the Chiefs.

"I now feel we have a fine corps of three young quarterbacks. While Tom is still young, he does have five years of solid pro experience that he brings with him. He has been an outstanding CFL quarterback the past five years, paralleling the career of Joe Theismann, who is now doing a good job with Washington Redskins."

Rookie quarterback Steve Fuller took over the starting job for the Chiefs last season and was backed up by another rookie, Bill Kenney. Fuller displaced veteran Mike Livingston, who has asked to be traded. The Chiefs have said they plan to trade Livingston before the start of the 1980 season.

Levy said he did not expect Clements to threaten the status of Fuller as the Chiefs' No. 1 quarterback.

Clements passed for 12,466 yards in five CFL seasons but is not considered a pure dropback passer. Levy said Clements's skills as a rollout and play-action passer would fit well into the Chiefs' offence.

Pro rules dropped by junior league

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Canadian National Junior Football League will adopt amateur rules starting in the 1980 season. The league, which previously played under Canadian Football League rules, was the only amateur football body in Canada still using professional rules.

New Eskimo tackle

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos of the Canadian Football League have signed all-American defensive tackle James Parker from Wake Forest University.

West won't negotiate, premiers tell Quebec

By KEITH WOOLHOUSE
FP News Service

LETHBRIDGE, Alta. — Quebecers are living under a "dangerous illusion" if they believe that voting "Yes" in next month's referendum will give Premier Rene Levesque a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association, the four Western premiers declared Tuesday.

"We shall never negotiate sovereignty-association with Quebec," Saskatchewan Premier Allan Blakeney said.

Flanked by his colleagues at the annual Western premiers' conference, Blakeney added: "If the mandate is to negotiate a renewed confederation, we can sit down and talk. But if it is to discuss sovereignty-association then there's going to be one long stalemate."

Premiers Peter Lougheed of Alberta, Sterling Lyon of Manitoba and Bill Bennett of British Columbia nodded in agreement.

In a joint communique, they said the economic association proposed by the PQ government is incompatible with the interests of Western Canada.

They believed that changes within the federation are essential and they proposed negotiations to strengthen and confirm provincial control over natural resources, including offshore resources, and greater powers in communications and a reform of national institutions.

They are proposing that Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau convene immediately after the May 20 referendum a meeting of provincial premiers to discuss the constitutional crisis.

"The object of constitutional reform must be to ensure that all provinces have the opportunity to build upon their strengths and thus to share in, and contribute to, a united and prosperous Canada," the communique read.

Premier Bennett refuted a suggestion that the premiers' intervention was coming at a late date and would have little influence on the outcome of the referendum.

"A late date for whom?" he sanapped at the questioner. "Your're presuming that all of us haven't entered into the discussions that have taken place up until now, in a serious way. And if that is your intention, then I resent it, because all of us have made some very forceful and realistic presentations."

He said: "What we are saying today is what we've been saying all along. There are other parts of the country besides Quebec and Quebecers who are concerned that the country operate in their interests as well.

"Look at other parts of the country to recognize whether our complaints are valid as we believe them to be and look at the positive solutions we've put forward to see if they will help to meet the concerns of the people of Quebec and other areas."

"It is necessary for provincial governments to respond as to the degree of their resolve to maintain control over their natural resources and to express to Ottawa that they would make a tragic miscalculation if they underestimated that resolve," he said.

But under persistent questioning at a news conference, he refused to elaborate any further on what measures Alberta would introduce to combat Ottawa's intervention.

Premier Bennett interjected: "That is not the Western premiers making a threat, that's our response to a threat — the threat of moving in on what is now under provincial jurisdiction.

"What we are saying is that we will resist any invasion of jurisdiction that belongs to the provinces now. That is like any country rejecting the threat of invasion. . . ."

N.W.T. freezes Hunt oil assets

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (UPC) — The Supreme Court of the Northwest Territories has frozen the more than billion-dollar Beaufort Sea assets of Texas multi-millionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt on a motion by BP Exploration (Libya) Ltd.

The injunction was issued as part of an action by BP to collect damages awarded against Hunt by a British court.

The BP claims, outstanding since 1971, concern debts incurred by Hunt while BP operated joint-interest oil fields in Libya before that country nationalized the fields.

The frozen assets are in the form of off-shore exploration permits for the area that could reap rich oil and gas reserves.

Hunt, whose lawyers will attempt to have the injunction quashed Saturday, already has pledged 20 per cent interest in the permits — worth an estimated $300 million — to Englehard Minerals and Chemicals of New York, to cover debts the Texan incurred when silver prices collapsed last month.

If the court quashes the injunction, the transfer to Englehard could proceed.

Streets are a holy horror

EDMONTON (CP) — There are thousands of potholes in Edmonton's streets and the men repairing them are beginning to hate their job.

The repair team, which has upwards of 52 men, has gone through 1,200 tonnes of patching material so far this spring and expects to use 3,950 tonnes this year. They recently filled no less than 1,000 potholes in one day.

They often have to repair the same hole again and again.

"Some have been repaired as many as three or four times," said Quin Mitchell, city road maintenance superviser. "They just pop right out. It's starting to get to the guys."

"We hate it," said Maurizio Russo, 31, who has been on the pothole work force for about a year. "It's boring."

It can also be dangerous.

"We've had lots of close calls," said Glen Biston, 27, a veteran at eight years. "The other day we were fixing several small holes at a corner and a guy came around at about 40 miles an hour, just to act smart."

The worst pothole the team has encountered so far was on Riverdale Road. "It was so bad we counted 23 hubcaps nearby," Beniston said.

In the morning each crew picks up complaint slips that have been filled out by operators answering a pothole hotline set up by the city.

Once at the site a caution sign is set up and the men, who wear fluorescent red safety vests, get to work. The rough edges of the hole are cleaned with a jackhammer and tar and asphalt are packed in and rolled flat.

"It looks easy but it can be tricky if the road is broken in several places or it's gone right down to the base," Beniston said.

Mitchell said alternating thaws and freezeups have made this year's pothole season about seven weeks, much longer than usual.

A pothole evolves with the weather. Rain and snow seep under the pavement and expand with cold weather. The pavement ruptures upward and then sags back when it thaws. A passing car pushes it further down. So what was repaired today might be an even larger pothole tomorrow.

"You can actually see them pop out," Mitchell said.

About 1,663 drivers have used city hall's potline since it was set up March 18. About 600 calls were from Edmonton Transit bus drivers.

"We appreciate the calls," Mitchell said, "we really do."

For some people, usually those in the car repair business, every pothole has a silver lining.

"Thank God for potholes," said a worker at Shorty's Alignment and Frame Shop. "That's what keeps me in business."

Against the grain?

RIVERS, Man. (CP) — Henry Lepp and his two sons have set up a mini grain handling system that could become an alternative to large elevator companies for farmers.

The Lepps' system was built for $500,000, employs five steel bins with a total capacity of 117,000 tonnes, and is located beside CN trackage. It is based on the long-held right of farmers to order and load their own railway cars.

By using their system, the Lepps bypass elevator charges for storage, elevation and loading. There is a small charge for odering producer cars, a concept first established to protect farmers from elevator monopolies.

One of the major advantages has been the Lepps' ability to ship rapeseed to Vancouver where high premiums were offered.

More seats urged for Saskatchewan

REGINA (CP) — Three more seats should be added to the 61-seat Saskatchewan legislature, the constituency boundaries commission has recommended in an interim report.

The three-member commission recommends creation of two additional Saskatoon seats and one more Regina seat, giving each city 10 seats in a 64-seat legislature.

The report also recommends minor changes in boundaries in two Moose Jaw seats and several rural ridings.

Man charged in $1M theft

EDSON, Alta. (CP) — A man charged with trying to sell $1 million in stolen confidential oil well documents has appeared in provincial court and elected trial by judge alone.

Norman Scott Stranden, 26, Edson, Alta., was charged with one count of theft over $200 March 1 and two more counts of the same charge April 9. A preliminary hearing was set for June 26.

The charges arose after RCMP in Edson arrested a man who approached three oil firms and offered to exchange the documents, relating to an oil well drilling program, for $25,000 cash. Oil company officials went ahead with the exchange in order to allow police to make the arrest.

Moose Jaw mayor's pay hiked

MOOSE JAW (CP) — An 18.8-per-cent increase in the mayor's salary and a 60.3-per-cent increase for aldermen have been approved by Moose Jaw city council Tuesday.

The increase, retroactive to Jan. 1, brings the mayor's salary to $22,500 from $18,937 and the aldermen's to $3,500 basic, plus $55 a meeting for 58 meetings from $1,070 basic and $53.50 a meeting.

Budget estimates originally recommended an eight-per-cent increase for both the mayor and aldermen.

Giants to miss the big show

EDMONTON (CP) — Two of Alberta's historical giants won't be a visible part of the province's 75th anniversary celebrations, Culture Minister Mary LeMessurier says.

The minister confirmed that two statues commemorating Princess Caroline Alberta, after whom the province was named, and Chief Crowfoot, won't be ready for the Sept. 1 anniversary date.

"They won't be done in time," she said. "I'd be surprised if they were."

It was the latest setback for the province's anniversary plans, which have been plagued by funding and organization delays. The government has come under some criticism for the way it is handling the anniversary of Alberta's entry into Confederation.

Nurses strike hits legal reef

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta nurses took their fight against a government back-to-work order to Court of Queen's Bench Tuesday but legal formalities could delay a quick settlement.

Simon Renouf, chief executive officer of the United Nurses of Alberta, said today the union filed its papers Tuesday afternoon but its case can't be heard immediately. He said other parties must be given 10 days notice, unless such notice is mutually waived or the court orders it waived.

"Our view, of course, is that we'd like to see this dealt with as soon as possible," said Renouf. "But it could be a little while . . . maybe by tomorrow but that depends on the lawyers."

The 6,600 nurses walked off the job Friday morning to back their contract demands. They were ordered back to work by cabinet Monday afternoon but have refused to obey that order, pending the outcome of the court ruling.

The strike is in its sixth day and there are indications of health problems arising at hospitals staffed by provincial nurses not eligible to strike.

Dr. Greg Powell, chief of emergency services at Foothills Hospital in Calgary, said Tuesday the hospital's emergency department has reached an imminent crisis state.

"We can go on at this rate for only about one more day," Dr. Powell said. "After that we'll have to take drastic measures."

Shirley Brown, president of the Foothills local of the UNA, said Tuesday that if the nurses are forced back to their jobs a mass resignation at Foothills is a strong possibility.

Trudeau fumbling attacked

MONTREAL (CP) — Quebec Premier Rene Levesque has lashed out at the Trudeau government for its poor management of the country's affairs, saying that Canada "is the worst-run country in the Western world."

Canadians used to brag they had the second-highest standard of living in the world, but now Canada has dropped to 12th position, Levesque said Tuesday evening in Sept-Iles, an industrial city 520 kilometres northeast of Quebec City.

Levesque told the rally that the Trudeau government is responsible for Canada's decline.

Meanwhile, Quebec Liberal Leader Claude Ryan spent the day campaigning in the Quebec City area.

"We will have to reunify Quebec after the sapping job done by the Parti Quebecois government since the 1976 election," Ryan said in a reference to what would happen should the Liberals take power in the next provincial election which is expected as early as this fall.

Spotlight on a world's woes

By DAN TURNER
FP News Service

OTTAWA —Wait for it.

Within the next six to twelve months Canadians are going to get a look at a world-wide project that not only represents a breakthrough for the international development community, but should also provide critical insights into why everybody's feeling so insecure lately.

And for Canadian taxpayers, the nice thing is this:

The initiative came from the much-maligned Canadian International Development Agency (our national dispenser of foreign aid) which unusually draws media attention only when it screws up the handing out of alms somewhere on the other side of the globe.

By fall at the earliest and winter at the latest the CBC expects to begin airing an 11-part series called Agenda for a Small Planet.

If it's anywhere near as good as its billed the series will show 600 million TV viewers from North Bay to Tokyo details of why the world isn't working.

Why the underdeveloped world isn't working, and more to the point for many Canadians, some of the reasons why the industrialized world is starting to stutter as well.

Agenda for a Small Planet currently has 11 production teams from 11 different "rich" countries filming in both rich and poor nations around the world.

Countries involved in the production consortium include:

Canada, West Germany, France, Italy, Japan, the United States, the Netherlands, New Zealand, Sweden, Belgium and Finland.

The idea is to present the issues and problems of world development in a more intelligent — but equally dramatic — manner than emerges from all those magazine ads featuring starving children.

Agenda for a Small Planet is designed to take a look at the social, political, cultural and economic factors that are at the core of the spectre that confronts both the developed and underdeveloped worlds.

The idea emerged from the 1977 North-South Conference in Paris, where Paul Doucette, CIDA's information chief, was media spokesman for the industrialized countries.

CIDA's Agenda for a Small Planet focuses on troubled world

Examples of subjects scripted for individual shows include: The industrialized world's dependence on third-world countries (Germany); Alternatives to high-technology development (Holland); The new international economic order (Finland); The arms race (Sweden); and major problems facing humanity over the next 20 years (Canada).

Another Canadian, ex-CBCer Jean Tetrault, was hired by the United Nations to bring the project together, and it seems to be succeeding despite filming difficulties in both underdeveloped and developed countries.

Some underdeveloped countries were reluctant to permit the filming of poverty they are ashamed of, and Tetrault had to twist some ambassadorial arms to gain access. At the other end, the Russians forbade any filming on their territory and the Americans wouldn't give film crews access to some of its military installations.

The 11 producers will submit work prints to a Montreal screening in mid-July, with most of the countries involved expected to go to air no later than six months from then.

Pitfield defends $107,800 severence payout

OTTAWA (CP) — Michael Pitfield said Tuesday he received $107,800 in damages and severence pay when he quit as clerk of the Privy Council at the request of former prime minister Joe Clark.

He added in a statement he gave $10,000 of that money back to the government when Prime Minister Trudeau hired him back to his old job nine months later.

Pitfield, a close friend of Trudeau's for many years, said he received 58 weeks' salary as damages and the "usual" termination payment of one week's salary for every year of service.

He had been in the public service for 20 years so his total settlement was 78 weeks' pay.

Pitfield said his $10,000 repayment was voluntary and was made after discussions with Trudeau. He said consideration was given to the fact the compensation was taxable.

He issued his statement after Progressive Conservative MP Tom Cossitt said in the Commons Pitfield received two years' salary — about $150,000 — when he resigned. However, he denied Cossitt's accusation and then issued a statement.

Pitfield was clerk of the Privy Council, the most powerful public servant, for several years under Trudeau. When the Conservatives won the May 22 election last year, he said he would not resign voluntarily.

Clark asked for his resignation and Pitfield tendered it June 4. He later went to Harvard University to teach, but when Trudeau was re-elected Feb. 18, he wasted little time in calling back his old friend. Pitfield resumed his old job March 11.

Pitfield said the one week's severance pay for each year's service is provided for in treasury board regulations.

He said the $107,800 was fully taxable at the highest rate unless transferred to a fund for his retirement 20 to 25 years from now.

He said he offered to repay some of the money to the government voluntarily. "This is an unusual thing to do and I was not under any legal requirement to do so."

The $10,000 was calculated on the basis that he had been away from the public service for about 40 of the 58 weeks he was paid for as damages. It took into account that the compensation came before he paid taxes.

Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville) said in a motion he sought to move in the Commons that Pitfield should repay the compensation he received.

He said Pitfield set up a consulting firm known as N. Michael Pitfield Investments Ltd. and asked the government to clarify whether his interest in the company had been declared under conflict-of-interest guidelines.

Pitfield said he has interest in the company only as a preferred shareholder and all details were disclosed under the government's conflict-of-interest guides before the May election. They would be declared again "when the rearrangement of my affairs in accordance with existing conflict-of-interest guides is completed."

Earlier Pitfield said in an interview Cossitt was "God damn unfair" in making his motion. He said the MP knew his statements were false.

Reports differ on qualities needed by StatsCan chief

OTTAWA (CP) — The main point of disagreement between two consultant reports released Tuesday on Statistics Canada is the main qualification a chief statistician should have.

The reports were tabled in the Commons by Don Johnston, Liberal president of Treasury Board, but were commissioned by his Progressive Conservative predecessor in office, Sinclair Stevens.

The report on the agency's management practices, done by the management consulting firm of Price Waterhouse Associates, insists the chief statistician should primarily be a person "with proven executive management competence."

The second report is on the methods used by the agency to collect and analyse data and was done by an international group of statisticians. They insist the chief statistician "needs effective professional leadership" more than any other qualification.

The reports are two of three commissioned by Stevens after long-standing criticism culminated in an uproar when Boris Celovsky, a senior employee, wote a letter to then chief statistician Peter Kirkham charging the agency with waste and corruption. The letter was leaked to the press Nov. 8.

The two reports tabled Tuesday were announced Dec. 10. But by March, sections of both reports had also been leaked to the press.

On March 14, Johnston gave up and issued a statement summarizing their conclusions.

On April 1, the minister dealt with the third report, an inquiry into Celovsky's allegations conducted by lawyer Peter Newcombe.

He said that report did not support the allegations of waste and corruption, but he didn't intend to table it in the Commons because of the personal references it contained.

Johnston also announced the appointment for two months of Lawrence Fry, deputy minister in supply and services, as acting chief statistician.

Monday, Johnston said Celovsky had been offered and had accepted a new job within Statistics Canada.

Wardair opts for two-class fare system

TORONTO (CP) — Wardair Canada Ltd. announced Tuesday it will have a two-class system on domestic routes beginning June 6. Wardair currently has one class on domestic flights with meals and bar service included in the price of a ticket.

From June 6 to Dec. 12, the round-trip airfare between Toronto and Vancouver will be reduced to $222 a person without meals and bar service and $242 for full meals and drinks. The cost of the flight now is $269.

Gov't spending to rise, how much not certain

OTTAWA (CP) — The government isn't certain how much it will spend this fiscal year, but the ball-park figure is between $58.4 billion and $60.4 billion, Treasury Board president Don Johnston announced Tuesday.

That means an increase in federal spending of between 11.4 per cent and 13.7 per cent over 1979-80, higher than the rate of growth in the economy generally.

However, Johnston maintained the government intends "to continue the policies of expenditure restraint, improve the efficiency of government programs and provide Canadians with more effective government."

In releasing the thick blue book of spending estimates for fiscal 1980-81 — prepared by the former Progressive Conservative government — Johnston revealed spending by federal departments and agencies could be $58.4 billion, up from $53.1 billion last year. But he cautioned the figures are subject to change because they do not fully reflect Liberal policies.

In fact, total government spending could rise to $60.4 billion in 1980-81, as predicted by Finance Minister Allan MacEachen when he presented his economic statement or mini-budget to the Commons Monday night.

The total spending projection of $60.4 billion means spending is rising 3.5 per cent faster than growth in gross national product — the amount of goods and services produced in the economy — despite a Liberal election promise to hold spending to the rate of growth in GNP.

Johnston told the Commons, as did MacEachen the night before, that unexpected oil price increases which raised the cost of oil subsidies, higher interest payments on the public debt and a $35-a-month increase in the guaranteed income supplement for the poorest pensioners were the main reasons for the $2-billion increase in estimated spending above the Conservatives' figures.

Short of major spending cuts — and none have been decided so far — officials say there is little flexibility left this year for the government to trim the estimates it tabled Tuesday.

The annual ritual of presenting spending estimates to Parliament is about two months behind schedule because of the Feb. 18 election.

As a result, Johnston said the government wanted to bring in the estimates, despite uncertainties over what they really mean, so that MPs could start their study of how federal money will be spent in the next 12 months.

Johnston, a rookie cabinet minister, came under fire in the Commons from opposition members who criticized his inability to provide details to show why over-all government spending is expected to be sharply higher this year.

The wrangle in the Commons over the vagueness of the figures came only one week after Auditor-General J.J. Macdonell again criticized the government in his annual report for not presenting clear and comprehensible material to Parliament.

Johnston conceded in the Commons there was great confusion over the spending figures but said it would be unproductive to attempt a full analysis in that setting.

He added that 83 per cent of the increased spending comes from transfers to other governments, individuals and corporations in Canada or paid in interest on the public debt.

These are items which the federal government pays as a result of federal-provincial negotiations or because of factors, such as higher interest charges, over which the government has no direct control.

Highlights of the estimates tabled Tuesday include:

—Spending of $18.5 billion, accounting for 32 per cent of government budgetary outlays, on health and welfare.

—Spending of $7.6 billion for economic development, accounting for 13.1 per cent of outlays.

—Spending of $6.1 billion on defence, or 10.5 per cent of outlays.

—Spending on job training will increase to about $630.2 million from $568.4 million while spending on direct job creation will drop to about $196.2 million from $281.7 million.

—allocation of about $15 million this fiscal year toward the long-term northwest highway project, which includes reconstruction of roadway and bridges on the Alaska Highway system.

—Reduction of $1.3 billion in Ottawa's share of unemployment insurance benefit costs, leaving the bulk to employers and employees.

—A cut of $1.1 billion to $576 million in so-called non-budgetary outlays — net loans, advances and other financial transactions with government agencies and Crown corporations.

However, the reduction is due mainly to a policy change requiring federal corporations to borrow funds in the private market rather than from the federal treasury.

Along with the spending estimates, Johnston indicated the government plans to cut the size of the public service by 4,042 person-years to 349,717 person-years in 1980-81.

But the actual reduction also was not precise as the government issued conflicting numbers and said its plans are subject to change.

Treasury board said that cuts will include 1,028 person-years from the Canada Employment and Immigration Commission, mainly because of cancellation of the Canada Works national job-creation program.

Agriculture, $767 million ($723 million); communications, $125 million ($104 million); consumer and corporate affairs, $79 million ($75.7 million); employment and immigration, $2.01 billion ($3.5 billion); energy, mines and resources, $3.2 billion ($1.12 billion); environment, $532 million ($463 million); external affairs, $1.13 billion ($1.03 billion).

Fisheries and Oceans, $335 million ($299 million); Indian affairs and northern development, $1.2 billion ($1.11 billion); industry, trade and commerce, $528 million ($466 million); justice, $154 million ($138 million).

National Revenue, $674 million ($604 million); post office, $1.55 billion ($1.35 billion); privy council, $57 million, :56 million); public works, $837 million ($757 million); regional economic expansion, $1.6 billion ($.46 billion); science and technology, $394 million ($335 million); secretary of state, $3.04 billion ($2.8 billion); social development, $3.7 million (newly created this year, no spending last year); solicitor-general, $1.05 billion ($936 million); supply and services, $169 million ($140 million); transport, $1.8 billion ($1.5 billion); treasury board, $665 million ($700 million); veterans affairs, $1.02 ($959 million).

Hart was set to train guerrillas

OTTAWA (CP) — Former undercover informer Warren Hart said Tuesday he had RCMP approval to train Canadian Indians to use guns and explosives at guerrilla-training camps in 1975.

Hart, an American who worked for the security service for 4½ years infiltrating radical black groups, said the RCMP planned to raid the camps — which were never set up — before anyone used his new-found expertise.

During a 1975 cross-Canada trip with black radical Roosevelt Douglas, on whom Hart was spying, Hart said he was asked to train Indians to use weapons and dynamite "for the next uprising."

Hart resumed giving evidence before the McDonald commission investigating allegations of RCMP wrongdoing Tuesday after a three-month delay for his former RCMP handlers to get a lawyer.

In answer to a question from commissvon chairman David McDonald, Hart said the RCMP would have expected him to give the promised weapons courses, but he was never asked to. He said he discussed the plan with two of his handlers.

"When you start a class of people the first thing you obtain is their name and location," Hart said. "After their training is complete you apprehend them."

The two guerrilla-training camps — one to be set up on the Mount Currie Indian Reserve in British Columbia — never materialized, he said.

Hart denied allegations made last year by the National Indian Brotherhood that it was he who proposed training people in use of explosives.

Overdue estuary report in month

The chairman of the Cowichan River Estuary Task Force said Tuesday the group's long-awaited final report will likely be finished within a month.

"I'm doing some final editing now," said Bryan Gates, a biologist working for the Secretariat of the B.C. government's Environment and Land Use Committee (ELUC).

The committee's final report, which is expected to include a comprehensive land-use plan for the Cowichan River estuary, will go to ELUC. The committee will then make final decisions on present and possible future industrial development on the estuary.

Gates said the final editing takes time because there are 20 members of the task force and they all must be polled on any changes.

The group began its work in early 1978 and was initially expected to file its final report by the end of October of that year.

In April, 1979, then-environment minister Rafe Mair said that because of an upcoming provincial election — May 11 — the task force report wouldn't be made public until after the end of May.

A source within the federal fisheries department said federal officials are becoming concerned at the delay in the release of the report.

When the study of the estuary first began there were five development applications for the Cowichan estuary. They were:

— From Western Energy, a subsidiary of Woodex Systems Ltd., based in Nanaimo, for construction of a plant for production of wood pellets from hog fuel. The pellets would be used as fuel and resemble mini-presto logs.

— From Island Shake and Shingle of Lake Cowichan, to construct a shake and shingle mill and a rail spur from the millsite to the western terminal.

— From B.C. Forest Products, a request to replace wood piles in its log storage area in the estuary.

Archives criticized

Greater Victoria may be one of the oldest settled areas of the province but it has one of the worst archive systems.

So says Martin Segger, one of two University of Victoria men who have conducted a study on the need for a central facility for the Victoria area.

Segger, director of the Maltwood Museum and chairman of the Heritage Advisory Committee for the city of Victoria, and Dr. Alan Artibise, an urban historian at UVic, are contacting various government bodies in the Victoria area with their report.

Their survey investigated methods now being used to keep municipal records and looked at future needs and options.

Right now conditions in the region range from Victoria's archives complete with archivist to smaller municipalities which have just been piling years of records in unused basement rooms.

"The whole question needs to be looked at because of the incredible amount of paper that's now being generated by government. Yet it's difficult to decide what must be kept," said Segger.

Segger said that paper includes municipal tax records, interdepartmental paper, intergovernmental paper, planning records, maps and much more.

"Maybe only 10 per cent of it needs to be kept but the question is what should be saved and how."

As an example, he cited one local municipality that had saved decades of dog licence records.

Victoria is the only body that has a long-standing archive system, although Saanich recently appointed an archivist.

Segger, as part of a plan to encourage discussion about archives, spoke to Sidney council Monday.

He asked aldermen to keep in mind present and future needs for record keeping and to consider appointing a member of council to a regional committee to consider the overall needs.

Modern archive keeping has two main functions, he said.

One is to preserve historically valuable papers and records and the other is to act as a record management service.

"It's the second function that pays the way for the first," said Segger.

The report recommends that a professional archivist be hired or at least consulted to determine what records should be kept.

Currently, Victoria is considering a proposal to put the old library building on Yates Street into use as its archive facility, but Segger recommends a decision be put off until an assessment is made of the region's needs.

DND wants out of teaching

The defence department wants to get out of the public education business in the Victoria area and has proposed a single school operated jointly with local school districts for all French language instruction.

National defence spokesmen met Tuesday with education ministry officials to discuss the concept.

The proposal would see the francophone school at CFB Esquimalt for children of French-speaking servicemen merged with the French core curriculum given by the public school system.

Capt. T.W. Strang, base education officer, said the department of national defence doesn't really want to be in the school business.

When the DND French school program was initiated seven years ago, it offered something the school districts were not offering, Strang said.

Today Greater Victoria School District offers the French core program and French immersion and Saanich and Sooke districts want to offer improved programs.

There is little difference between the programs offered now by Victoria and the Brodeur school.

The officer said DND and education ministry representatives will discuss ground rules of the proposed merger, such as maintenance of course content, location of the school and cost-sharing.

Ottawa's proposal would apply also to Chilliwack school district, where the armed forces have a large number of base personnel.

The base school — named L'Ecole Victor E. Brodeur — has a principal who handles all the clerical work and teaches occasionally; five fulltime teachers and two part-time teachers who instruct entirely in French.

One area of potential difficulty might be the DND view that its teachers should be absorbed into the public school districts.

Strang said the prospects for this are good in view of the history of hiring French teachers in this province.

There are two programs offered in the Greater Victoria district, one for English-speaking children whose parents want them to become bilingual, and one for French-speaking children who are taught the core curriculum in their language.

Curriculum superintendent Bernie Chandler said combination with the base school would offer excellent opportunity for the children in both systems.

DND proposes the fall of next year for the new school, which could be situated in the Lampson Street School which has been closed for four years, or at Harbor View.

Hemlock a fast killer, jury told

Plants belonging to the hemlock family are so lethal that if they're eaten, chances of survival are slim unless treatment is immediate, two Victoria doctors told a coroner's jury Tuesday night.

Dr. Michael Yaremco and pathologist Dr. Frank Berry were testifying at an inquest into the death of five-year-old Isabelle Yellowknee who died April 11, six days after eating a poisonous plant while playing with some other children near her home at 21 Hayward Heights.

Berry said the poison causes a respiratory arrest leading to brain damage and death.

While he said he had no previous experience with hemlock poisoning cases, he was aware breathing would stop within about 15 minutes of consuming the plant.

He and Yaremco felt survival was possible only if treatment was almost immediate and the patient still conscious.

Anna Kosyra, a neighbor babysitting the youngster at the time of the incident, said Isabelle complained of stomach pains and wouldn't eat lunch.

Kosyra said she had the girl lie down on a cot and discovered about an hour later that the color had drained from her face and her body had gone limp.

Until then she was unaware Isabelle had eaten a plant.

A plant described by other children as the type she had eaten was taken to hospital where it was identified as Conium maculatum, a weed common to southern vancouver Island.

Medical evidence disclosed the youngster was in a state of cardiac arrest when an ambulance crew arrived. She never regained consciousness.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre said he was concerned about the number of poisonous plants growing in Greater Victoria.

"This place is full of poison," he said.

St. Jorre adjourned the inquest to next Monday night for further evidence.

Before the judge

Two men were denied bail by Judge Blake Allan in provincial court on Tuesday.

James Keith Henderson, 44, of 516 Yates, was remanded in custody until Friday after being charged with common assault in connection with a downtown incident Monday night involving a young woman.

Also kept in custody was 27-year-old Donald Glen Cole, no fixed address.

He was charged with the July 19 theft of cheques taken in a break-in at 948 Esquimalt Road and possession of stolen property.

He was remanded until next Tuesday for plea.

An 18-year-old was fined $75 for taking part in a restaurant brawl Jan. 12.

Randy McLeod, 924 Dunford, pleaded guilty to causing a disturbance by fighting at the Colwood McDonald's, 1742 Island Highway.

Crown counsel Don Laughton said McLeod was one of about 10 persons involved in a fight between civilians and members of the Canadian Forces. Laughton said the incident started when the civilians called the forces personnel "Pongos."

McLeod said the fight started after his girlfriend was struck.

Death toll 'frightening'

The shocking mortality statistics for B.C. Indians are a major reason Ottawa either should give the provincial government responsibility for native health care or do more itself, Health Minister Rafe Mair said Tuesday.

Mair, who met with federal Health Minister Monique Begin this week in Ottawa, said a number of problem areas were discussed and they agreed to set up a federal-provincial committee to look at ways of providing better health care for B.C.'s 54,000 registered Indians.

The federal government currently budgets about $1 million a year for native health care in B.C., primarily for Indians living on or near reserves.

Mair said statistics show that, compared with other British Columbians, native Indians are the victims of a frightening death rate pattern.

The Indian death rate from accidents, poisoning and violence is 2.75 times the general provincial rate — 295 deaths a 100,000 population compared to 107 a 100,000 for non-Indians.

The federal health department's Vancouver regional headquarters also estimates that alcohol abuse is a contributing factor in 80 per cent of all deaths from accidents and violence.

Mair said the committee will be set up within the next two or three weeks.

Beaten to death

KAMPALA (AP) — Residents of the western Ugandan town of Muhanga beat two members of the country's interim parliament to death after the legislators' car ran into a van killing three passengers, government sources said Wednesday.

UVic extension courses aim to be the best

By AB KENT

The University of Victoria extension department is trying to make UVic a model for adult students and pensioners returning to the classroom.

Extension director Dr. Glen Farrell said the university is interested in developing more programs and services that cater to the older age group.

"We should have one of the best-developed programs for seniors," Farrell said.

About 25 senior adults — defined by UVic as basically persons of retirement age — were enrolled in credit courses in the year just ending. Another 500 were taking credit-free lectures, seminars and workshops.

Farrell said the university is surveying its senior adults to determine how procedures like accounting and registration might be made more accessible.

In addition, an ad hoc committee of non-credit seniors was set up to recommend courses, lecture times and similar matters.

Mature students taking credit courses pay the same fees as others enrolled at UVic. But over-65 students in audit or non-credit courses are charged only half the regular tuition.

To improve awareness of what the university offers seniors, a 30-minute TV film, What Am I Missing? was made by theatre student Gary McKevitt for University of Victoria Television Productions for showing on Cable 10. It will be shown for the third time at 3 p.m. May 2.

Victoria man killed in crash

RCMP said Richard Ellery Fales, whose address was not available, died when his car went off the road at a curve on Highway 4 West, 26 kilometres west of here.

Fales was the only occupant in the car.

The accident was discovered at about 8 a.m.

Saanich joins opposition

A bylaw authorizing Saanich to join Victoria in legal action against a crematorium under construction in Hatley Park Memorial Gardens received third reading Monday by Saanich council.

Council will pass the bylaw Monday.

The action is being taken because Saanich and Victoria believe the new crematorium will jeopardize municipal operations.

65-and-out policy upheld

VANCOUVER (CP) — An employee can be forced to retire at 65 if compulsory retirement at that age is the established policy of his company, the B.C. Court of Appeal ruled Tuesday in upholding a Labor Relations Board arbitration award.

The appeal court made its decision in an appeal brought by the International Woodworkers of America Local 1-405 against Hugh Ladner's finding in an arbitration.

The union had challenged the right of Crestbrook Forest Industries to retire Kazimer Shuflita at 65 when the employee did not wish to retire.

The union sought to invoke provisions of the B.C. Human Rights Code which prohibits management from discriminating against an employee because of age unless there is reasonable cause.

Ladner, in ruling against the union, concluded that a company's uniformly-applied policy of mandatory retirement at age 65 was capable of constituting reasonable cause under the human rights code.

At the time of the arbitration hearing, lawyers for both sides agreed that Ladner was right when he said that the effect of the human rights code is to provide a blanket protection for any age of 45 years or more and less than 65 years.

The union had argued that the human rights code should be read to mean that if the employee is 65 and is capable of doing the job there can be no reasonable cause for retiring him.

"The legislation has spelled out that at a certain age the impact of the human rights code changes," said Mr. Justice P. D. Seaton, who wrote the appeal court's decision.

The appeal court judge said that he and his fellow judges had studied the reasoning of other arbitrators and judges who had ruled on the retirement issue.

He noted one in which an arbitration board "examined a case of mandatory retirement at age 65 and concluded that the policy of mandatory retirement at age 65 had wide public acceptance and that it was inappropriate for a board of arbitration to declare that an employer who adopted it was acting without reasonable cause."

TV set blamed for fatal city blaze

City fire officials believe a malfunction in an instant-on television set may have caused a fire in a James Bay home Monday night that killed two persons and injured two firemen.

Victoria deputy fire chief Whitey Severson said today heavy charring and burning in the area of the living room where the television was indicates this is where the blaze broke out.

The fire started about 11:30 p.m. and rapidly spread through the house at 57 South Turner.

The bodies of David Murdoch, 59, and Lorraine LePoidevin, 58, were found in an upstairs bedroom near a window.

Severson said investigators have learned Murdoch purchased a new console instant-on television a short time ago and had told friends and relatives he had had some electrical problems with the set.

Severson said however the investigation is still incomplete.

He said there have been several fires in recent years attributed to malfunctioning instant-on television sets.

Most have been fairly minor but one fire last year caused extensive damage to a city home, he said.

Severson said sets should be unplugged when not in use.

Meanwhile Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre is expected to order an inquest into the two deaths but has not set a date as yet.

Severson said the two firefighters injured while fighting the blaze, Captain Stan Gow and fireman Stu Hemmings, are recovering at home.

He said Hemmings, the more seriously injured of the two — he suffered burns to both hands — will be off work for several days.

It hasn't been an easy trip. After being attacked by wild dogs in Jordan, threatened by a lion in Tanzania and jailed in Guinea, round-the-world cyclist B.V. Narayana, 19, of India hit a North American hazard. His trip came to an abrupt halt in Chicago when a thief stole his bicycle.

Kilroy — the ubiquitous imp, nose draped over the outline of a fence — followed soldiers through the Second World War then faded into history. Now he's being unfaded in New York in a bid for big bucks by Jules Rifkind of Spring Records who was lucky enough to find out Kilroy no longer is in the public domain. Rifkind launched a legal search after being fascinated with the fortune made by the people who trademarked the "Smile" button. He learned to his joy that Kilroy was equally trademarkable. Now Kilroy's visage is turning up on Rifkind's T-shirts, jeans and socks while dollar signs turn up in Rifkind's eyes.

Graham

Back in 1936, when she was about 14 years old (and weighed 100 pounds) she made a hit in the movie Three Smart Girls with Eddie Cantor. In 100 Men and a Girl, her bright soprano soared above an orchestra conducted by Leopold Stokowski. By 1947 Deanna Durbin was listed by the as the U.S.'s highest paid woman. After 13 years of making movies and two failed Hollywood marriages, Durbin retired. She married in 1950 and has lived since then in Neauphle-le-Chateau, a village in France, with her husband and their two sons. Pictures taken 20 years ago show a well-rounded matron. In a letter to Life magazine, printed along with the picture of a slim, trim woman with a once-celebrated smile — Durbin said that, even "after so many years of happy oblivion," she wanted to set the rumors straight. "I can still pass under the Arc de Triomphe without holding my breath," she wrote.

Billy Graham says he's not about to stop preaching, but doctors' orders may force retirement as head of the evangelical organization that bears his name. The 61-year-old evangelist has been told he has several potentially serious medical problems, so he's slowing down, but he said at his Montreat, N.C., offices, "No, I'll never retire from preaching." Graham says in the interest of health, he runs two miles a day — that, "My dogs go with me. They used to run but now they sit in the middle since they found out I was not going anywhere."

Dear Abby:
I was having trouble getting a clear picture on my TV, so I phoned a TV repair service in my neighborhood. A nice-looking young man came right over and examined the set.

When I asked him how much it would cost to have it fixed, he smiled, looked me over, and said, "That all depends on how nice you are to me." We both laughed, then he said, "Don't worry, lady, I'll give you my rock-bottom price." Then he took my set with him and said he'd bring it back in a few days.

Well, a week passed and no set, so I called him and asked when he was going to bring my set back. He said, "when you call and tell me your husband isn't home"!

That's where we stand. How do I get my set back without causing a fuss? If my husband knew about this, he would go to that shop and take that little punk apart.

No TV

Dear No TV:
Call your friendly neighborhood Casanova and tell him if he doesn't have your set back today you will a) tell your husband, and b) report him to the Better Business Bureau.

Dear Abby:
Four years ago my husband and I loaned my divorced mother $2,000 to help her buy a home. She works very hard, earns a minimum wage and can hardly pay her bills. As far as I'm concerned, the money doesn't have to be repaid until after her death.

My husband is constantly arguing with me about it and putting my mother down because she has been unable to pay any part of this debt. In the last four years we have given his parents many expensive gifts, and they are very well-off.

Caught in the Middle

Dear Caught:
Tell hubby to get off your back, and refuse to engage in any further dialogue about it.

Dear Abby:
I hope you won't think this question is too dumb to answer, because I really want to know the answer.

When a pair of twins are born, and one is a girl and the other is a boy, is it true that the girl twin will never be able to have children? A neighbor who is studying veterinary medicine told me this, and he should know.

Worried

Dear Worried:
Your neighbor is wrong. He is assuming that the same reproductive laws that apply to cattle also apply to humans. They don't. With cattle, when a male and female are twin-born, the female (called a "freemartin") is almost always sterile. This is not true in humans.

Quality vanishes with chef

EDMONTON (CP) — If the quality of food in your favorite restaurant suddenly changes, chances are the chef quit.

There are few occupations with a turnover rate as high as the cooking business, much to the distress of restaurateurs.

"We must get off our butts and do something to change the image of professional cooking," said J. W. Frise, general manager of Edmonton's Chateau Lacombe, owned by Canadian Pacific Ltd.

Ivan Goh, executive assistant manger of the Four Seasons Hotel in Edmonton, said cooking in North America does not command the same high status as in other parts of the world.

"In Europe the cooking profession is highly esteemed," Goh said. "It's still a tradition for young people to follow their elders into cooking careers."

The creativity of a good chef is also stifled in Canada and the United States, he said.

Ralph Deda, who wrote his journeyman cooking exam last week, said salaries are the reason for the lack of chefs.

When the restaurant industry starts paying apprentice cooks at least as much as unskilled laborers interest in cooking careers will soar, he said.

"The work is hard, hours are long and you may as well kiss your social life goodbye," he said.

Deda said his first two years after graduation from the Northern Alberta Institute of Technology "were the hardest I ever worked with the toughest hours and the least money I had ever made."

He declined to reveal his current earnings at the Petroleum Club in Edmonton but said an apprentice cook's wages are between $4 and $5 an hour.

"It's all right if you live at home but it's an impossible income to live on, especially if there are dependents to support.

"The cooks I know who are making $20,000 a year are working at two jobs."

Deda said even chefs who earn as much as $50,000 a year are underpaid considering the responsibilities of a job that demands 24-hour attention and includes managing people, ordering food and pricing meals.

Some restaurants are taking new approaches to maintain the quality of food.

The Four Seasons started an apprenticeship program to mould cooking school graduates to its own needs.

The Empress of China, with a reputation for consistently good Cantonese cuisine, works from basic recipes which each of its eight cooks must learn.

"If the chef quits someone else can take over and the quality stays the same," said manager Victor Tse.

Kids have pie in sky tastes

More than 500 experienced air travellers between the ages of six and 14 have given one of Canada's airlines a pointed meal message: "Keep it plain and simple."

The children, all members of Canadian Pacific Airlines families in Vancouver and Toronto, participated in a survey by the airline to help determine what food they do you like to eat on the plane.

They were asked to give their preferences for breakfast, lunch/dinner, and a snack. No suggestions were provided — it was left entirely to the children to volunteer their own menu ideas.

For the most part, the young travellers did not have fussy tastes. Pancakes led the poll for breakfast, steak ranked first for dinner, and cookies were a runaway winner for the snack.

Bruno Marti, catering and commissary manager, said in a press release to the Times that a children's snack pack has already been introduced on all flights leaving Vancouver as a result of the poll. It contains a cookie, two pieces of chocolate, raisins, nuts and a chocolate-covered cherry.

The airline already offers more than a dozen special dietary and religious meals, but as could be expected from a large sampling of 554 young travellers, they were outdone by some other exotic suggestions. One 13-year-old wanted eggs benedict and papaya for breakfast, duck a la orange, baked potato and peas for dinner; and chocolate cake for a snack.

A nine-year-old's response was typical of the overall poll result, with the exception of dinner which was to be not just steak, but "steak and lobster," with root beer to drink. The breakfast selection was "pancakes, milk" and the snack suggestion was "cookies."

A total of 445 parents also responded to the survey with some thoughts on what they'd like to see on a child's plate, and in general they concurred with the youngsters.

Both parents and children agreed that an ideal breakfast consist of some combination of pancakes, dry cereal, bacon and eggs, toast, juice and milk.

Luncheon ideas focused upon hamburgers, hot dogs, french fries, pizza or soup and sandwich combinations. Younger children's tastes in sandwiches tended towards peanut butter, jam and cheese, while over the age of 10 the preference was tuna, egg and grilled cheese.

Parents had no objections to hamburgers, however they gave minimal support to pizza.

A chicken entree was a distant second to the popular dinner choice of steak packaged with cooked vegetables and fries.

Cookies and fruit were two popular choices of both children and parents. Children reported an interest in cake, potato chips, and chocolate bars; however parents preferred such substitutes as raisins, granola bars, cheese and crackers, and peanuts.

New drug in quest for psoriasis cure

By DR. L.L. COLEMAN

Psoriasis has tenaciously resisted the onslaught of all scientific investigation. Even though new treatments have been disappointing, doctors continue to pursue the goal of a cure.

Dr. W. Mueller and Dr. B. Herrmann of the University Clinic in Basel, Switzerland, have recently reported a pilot study on patients with psoriasis of the skin and psoriatic arthritis. Using a drug, cyclosporin A, the doctors noted a dramatic reduction in psoriasis after about one week. Even though the skin lesions gradually returned to their previous degree of severity, repeated treatment had renewed beneficial effects.

Such control over psoriasis is sufficiently exciting to warrant further study, to determine not only value, but safety, of cyclosporin A.

The arduous dedication with which scientists are pursuing this important problem means that somewhere soon on the horizon may be not only the control, but the actual cure, of this distressing illness.

An interesting new approach to the treatment of some forms of arthritis is the target of investigation for a team of doctors at the Cedars-Sinai Medical Centre in Los Angeles. Dr. Daniel Wallace and Dr. James Klinenberg are using a filtering technique that removes plasma from the blood and then replaces it with other fluids, to treat sufferers of rheumatoid arthritis.

This technique, called "plasmapheresis," is being tried among a group of patients who have failed to respond to other forms of treatment now available.

In the small group of patients who were treated, the observers noted that there was marked decrease in the stiffness of the joints and relief from other symptoms. The doctors said, "The remission lasted an average of three months, but in one patient as long as eight months. In addition, this blood filtering method seemed to improve the patient's response to conventional arthritis drugs."

The whole concept of this idea is to eliminate those substances in the blood that are responsible for the inflammation of the joints which is so characteristic of arthritis.

The exact substance that is removed by this filtering technique is not known. The process holds hope and will, of course, be studied more intensively by other groups of scientists.

Speaking of Your Health... Many drugs do not mix well with others. This is known as "chemical incompatibility." Be sure to tell your doctor if you are taking any drugs other than those he has prescribed for you.

Trio of cream dessert recipes dried and true

hilda beastall

Pies or fancy cakes piled with sweetened whipped cream are poor substitutes for fruit desserts while we await garden ripened berries in the coming months. Even the storage apples have lost their flavor, but we can make use of some of the dried fruits — prunes, dates, raisins — prepared as though for pie fillings, and serve them as cream desserts.

These same recipes can be used for making the various pies, quite delicious and nutritious with a good pastry, a yeast dough crust, or a sponge shell in a flan tin.

Notice there is little sugar added to the fruits, only a touch of molasses to the prune dessert which is a bit flat without it because it is thickened with rice polishings. Orange and lemon juice or the rind of the fruits points up the fruit flavors instead of using sugar which only really masks the true flavor and creates a desire for even more sweetness.

So here is Date Cream Dessert. Look over the ingredients to see that all are in your cupboard stock. The rice polishings are a fine source of minerals and also of the vitamin B complex.

DATE CREAM DESSERT

- ¾ cup pitted, chopped dates
- 2½ cups water
- 1 cup skim milk powder
- 4 tbsp (level) rice polishings
- ¼ tsp salt
- ½ tsp grated orange rind

Mix rice polishings with some of the water; add remainder to the cut dates in saucepan and bring to boil mashing the dates well. Add remaining ingredients and the rice polishings and cook, stirring, until thickened. Boil for a few minutes. Cool.

Spoon into individual dessert dishes (glass looks attractive) and serve with spoonful of homemade yogurt on top. Serves 4 or 5. Or the same amount makes a 20 cm diameter pie as suggested above.

PRUNE CREAM DESSERT

- 2 cups cooked prunes
- ½ cup water
- 2 tbsp (level) rice polishings
- 1 tsp lemon juice
- ¼ tsp salt
- 1 tbsp blackstrap molasses

Rice polishings are used as a nutritious thickener. Lemon juice and blackstrap sharpen the flavor while adding their small quota of nutrition.

DRIED OR FRESH, prune plums make tasty pies. When the fresh fruit season is a long wait to go, flavor need not be compromised for the sake of better nutrition when it comes time to pick a main meal dessert. In today's array of recipes for cream desserts using dried fruit, there is little sugar added and both orange and lemon juice to perk up flavor — since excessive amounts of sugar only tend to mask the true flavor and creates a desire for even more sweetness.

Mix rice polishings with water in saucepan. Add cut-up prunes and other ingredients; cook until thick and smooth. Cool.

And now here is Raisin Cream Dessert. If these desserts are spooned when cool into the plastic containers used in lunch kits, they will become favorites for school youngsters. In larger containers, for men's lunches, with thick slices of homemade bread with cheese.

RAISIN CREAM DESSERT

- 1½ cups seedless raisins
- ½ cup water
- 2 tbsp (level) rice polishings
- 1½ cups water
- ¼ tsp salt
- 1 tbsp orange juice
- 1 tbsp soft margarine

Cook raisins in ½ cup water in saucepan for few minutes.

If you get too much rice polishings (by not levelling the spoon measurements) just add a little more hot water as the cooking takes place. If too thin a mixture (hardly likely to happen) stir in a little more thickener.

Here is a quickly made and deliciously crisp Sponge Shell to be filled with one of the above Cream Desserts. The shell can be made ahead of need, and frozen for a week or so. Take it out of the freezer about 4 hours to room temperature before filling and serving.

SPONGE SHELL FOR FRUIT CREAM DESSERTS

- ½ cup soft margarine
- 3 tbsp sugar
- 2 small eggs
- 1 cup unbleached flour
- 1 tsp baking powder
- 2 tbsp wheat germ
- ¼ tsp salt

Cream margarine and sugar in bowl until fluffy. Beat eggs in one at a time, using a large wooden spoon until mixture is light.

Sift in mixed dry ingredients, and mix lightly with spoon only until all is dampened.

Lightly grease and flour pie plate or flan tin. Spoon in the mixture to cover the plate or tin evenly.

Bake in moderate oven 177°C about 20 minutes until lightly browned. Remove from oven. Cool in pan for about 15 minutes.

If in flan tin, turn out upside down on large shallow plate and spoon in the prepared Fruit Cream Dessert as chosen from the recipes given above. Use spoonful of yogurt on top as suggested.

You will be able to put together other combinations of Cream Desserts that can also be used as pie filling. Some will become favorites.

Use them often in this off season for fresh local fruit. While cutting down on sugar in these desserts there will be an increase of available nutrients in the food enjoyed by you and your family.

If your skin has reached a turning point in life, there is an alternative

MILLENIUM BY ELIZABETH ARDEN

Scientific research shows that two of the primary characteristics of aging skin are:
(1) a slowdown of the skin cell renewal process and,
(2) a decrease in the skin's youthful ability to care for itself.

MILLENIUM offers an alternative to both. First, it actually accelerates the natural skin cell renewal process to make your skin look and feel more youthful, supple, resilient. And second, MILLENIUM recalls your skin's youthful ability to effectively conserve and use its moisture. Little dry lines relax, sleek out. Your skin takes on a new radiance.

Now, the future of your face has just changed. Try any of these fine MILLENIUM products; now available at the Bay:

In a stew? It must be Thursday

By MIKE McGRADY

Thursday was stew night. Nothing was ever spelled out, nothing written on the calendar, but most Thursdays of my boyhood wound up with a steaming bowl of stew. Maybe my mother was using up the remnants of the Monday shopping trip; perhaps she was just taking a breather before the big weekend meals. Whatever the reason, if we sat down to a stew, we knew it must be Thursday.

Not that there was anything wrong with my mother's stew. It's just that stew, through the ages, has suffered from bad public relations. From the beginning, the word "stew" has had unfortunate connotations. Originally it meant a hot house, then a brothel, then a prostitute. Even today a man in trouble is said to be "in a stew."

Which explains why you can go into the world's fanciest restaurants and never find a menu with the word "stew." In time, as memories of my mother's stew faded, I occasionally went into a fancy restaurant. It was there that I first ordered Beef Bourguignon or, as it was written on the menu, "Boeuf a la Bourguignonne." The first mouthful brought me back through time; suddenly it was Thursday night. Yes, it was stew. And so is this.

The Staples: Make sure these are all on hand: butter, bay leaf, thyme, salt, pepper, sugar, flour, garlic, olive oil.

The Shopping List: Top round beef (three pounds); bacon (one-half pound); small white onions (15 to 20); mushrooms (one pound); tomato paste (small can); a can of beef bouillon, two bottles of burgundy wine; Grand Marnier liqueur (small bottle); parsley; celery, one carrot, loaf of French or Italian bread; large eating oranges.

3 p.m.: First we brown the beef. Cut the beef into bite-sized cubes. Put a half cup of flour in a brown paper bag and shake the beef chunks until they're coated with flour.

In a heavy frying pan over medium-high heat, melt one-half stick of butter and add a splash of olive oil. Brown the cubes of meat quickly, moving them around so that they cook briefly on all sides. Then transfer them to an oven-proof casserole. If the frying pan tends to dry out, add more butter and oil.

3:30 p.m.: Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Using the same heavy frying pan over a medium-low heat, melt some butter and add two small white onions, chopped very fine. Then one carrot, peeled and chopped fine. And a stalk of celery — including the leaves — rinsed clean, then chopped fine. And two cloves of garlic, minced. Cook these over a medium-low heat until they are softened and then remove from the heat.

Add a tablespoon of tomato paste to the pan and stir in three tablespoons of flour. Again putting the pan over medium heat, stir constantly until the flour just starts to brown. Now add half a bottle of burgundy and a can of beef bouillon. Continue to stir gently until mixture comes to a boil. Lower the heat and stir until the sauce is thick and smooth. Then pour it over the meat in the casserole dish.

And now the seasonings. Chop four or five sprigs of parsley fine and add these. Along with a large bay leaf. A pinch of thyme. A generous amount of salt and pepper. Pop the casserole into the oven. It should take between two-and-a-half and three hours until the meat is sufficiently tender.

5:30 p.m.: Peel the new potatoes and cook in boiling water until a fork pierces them easily, approximately 20 minutes.

Fry the bacon, cut into small pieces. Peel away the outer layers of the small white onions and brown them with bacon. As they are cooking, add a splash of red wine and after they are slightly browned, add the onions and bacon to the casserole dish in the oven.

6 p.m.: Rinse the mushrooms and cut away the stem tips. Then, leaving the mushrooms whole, saute them gently over a medium-low heat, again in butter. Keep warm along with the potatoes.

6:10 p.m.: Now for the garlic bread. Slice the loaf lengthwise either once or twice. Butter one side of each section and add slivers of garlic. Then place in the oven for 10 to 15 minutes, until the butter has melted and the bread has started to brown.

6:20 p.m.: Remove the garlic bread and carefully scrape away all the garlic slivers. (Danger! All of them). Add the potatoes and mushrooms to the Beef Bourguignon and serve piping hot, accompanied by a bottle of red wine. Then bring out the garlic bread for the mopping-up operation. This will all be followed by thick slices of peeled orange, lightly sugared and flavored with just a splash of Grand Marnier.

A final note. Whether you call this dish Beef Bourguignon or just plain stew, try to save some leftovers. If you've done your job properly, this may not be so easy. What you'll do with the leftovers is this: add some chopped onions, some other vegetables, some bouillon or water, some seasonings. What you will have then is a first-rate soup. Or potage. All I know is that we called it soup and we knew it was Friday.

Chicken ratatouille a meal-sized soup

2-pound young chicken
2 quarts plus quarter-cup water
2 cloves garlic, mashed
2 teaspoons salt
1 bay leaf
Optional: 1 teaspoon MSG
16-ounce can stewed tomatoes, broken up
6-ounce can tomato paste
2 tablespoons vinegar, or lemon juice
2 cups sliced onion
½ cup loose parsley, chopped
2 cups diced bell pepper
2 cups pared diced eggplant
10-ounce package kitchen-cut green beans
1 tablespoon cornstarch

Put the chicken in a soup pot and add 2 quarts water, mashed garlic, salt, bay leaf, MSG, if desired. Heat to boiling, skim foam. Lower to simmering. Cover; simmer until meat is tender, about 50 minutes. Strain broth and refrigerate. Discard garlic and bay leaf. When chicken is cool enough to handle, separate meat and dice it into bite-size pieces. Discard skin and bones. Refrigerate meat.

To prepare soup: remove chilled broth from refrigerator. Skim and discard fat that has risen to the surface. Heat broth to boiling. Add tomatoes, tomato paste and vinegar; stir smooth. Add onion, parsley, bell pepper and eggplant; cover and simmer 20 minutes. Add frozen green beans. Cover and cook 10 minutes. Stir in reserved meat. Heat through. Combine cornstarch and remaining cold water, mix well. Stir into the soup until it simmers and thickens slightly. Serve hot. Makes eight meal-size servings, 165 calories each; or 12 soup servings, 110 calories each.

Early berries are here

Gilbert and Sullivan's light opera lyrics, "the flowers that bloom in the spring . . . tra la," might well refer to the blossoms that bloom in profusion on the strawberry plants in the rich, loamy, fields from California to southern B.C.

These strawberry blossoms not only bloom in the spring, they continue to bloom throughout the summer and into the fall, producing beautiful, ruby-red strawberries that add brilliant color and flavor wherever they appear all season long. Right now, those first strawberry superstars are arriving from California to tell us spring's here.

One of the nicest things about strawberries is their marvellous versatility. Their delicate flavor is irresitible, whether served plain or fancy, from morning to night. So it's a good idea to keep several baskets of juicy strawberries on hand to enjoy from that first bowlful in the morning to a scrumptuous snack after dinner.

Throughout the months ahead, you'll find strawberries are one of the best buys in the produce department. Their good value is more than just reasonable price. Besides eye appeal and terrific flavor, strawberries are an excellent source of vitamin C and low in calories. A whole cup of fresh berries has only about 60 calories.

Strawberries are a wonderful addition to main dish salads. The Springtime Strawberry Salad is a beautiful kaleidoscope of colors with brilliant, red strawberries, golden pineapple chunks and vibrant orange slices arranged atop butter lettuce with a choice of piquant dressings or no dressing at all. What a delightful way to count calories!

From now through fall, bright red, sweet strawberries will be available in good supply. So enjoy them often in salads like this or in creations of your own.

SPRINGTIME STRAWBERRY SALAD

Butter lettuce leaves
1 pint fresh California stawberries, stemmed
1 orange, peeled and sliced
1 cup pineapple chunks
Orange yogurt Dressing or Cream Dressing (recipes follow)

Arrange lettuce, strawberries, orange and pineapple on serving platter or individual serving plates; chill. To serve, pass Orange Yogurt Dressing or Cream Dressing separately. Makes 4 servings.

Orange Yogurt Dressing: In small bowl smix together ⅓ cup orange juice, ⅓ cup yogurt and 1 teaspoon sugar; chill. Garnish with grated orange peel, if desired. Makes ⅔ cup.

Cream Dressing: In small bowl mix together ½ cup whipping cream, ¼ cup white vinegar and 2 tablespoons sugar; chill. Makes about ¾ cup.

Two hasty snacks

2½ cups sifted flour
½ cup wheat germ
1 tablespoon celery seeds
½ teaspoon salt
1 cup soft butter or margarine
1 cup creamed cottage cheese

In a large bowl mix flour, wheat germ, celery seeds and salt. Add butter and cottage cheese. Cut in with pastry blender until well blended. Roll dough in plastic wrap and chill at least 1 hour. Roll out ¼ of the dough ⅛-inch thick. Cut dough with 2-inch cookie cutter and place on ungreased baking sheet. Repeat with remaining dough. Pierce each cracker with fork 3 or 4 times. Place in 450 degree oven, lower to 400 degrees and bake 12 to 15 minutes, or until lightly browned. Remove from baking sheet and cool on rack. Makes about 11 dozen crackers.

CORN DOGS

1 cup flour
2 tablespoons sugar
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
⅔ cup cornmeal
1 egg, lightly beaten
¾ cup milk
1 pound frankfurters
Oil for deep frying
Ketchup
Mustard

Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Stir in cornmeal. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse meal. Mix egg and milk and stir into cornmeal mixture until blended. Insert wooden skewer into end of each frank. Coat evenly with batter. Fry in deep oil heated to 375 degrees until brown. Drain on paper towels and serve with ketchup and mustard. Makes 10 servings.

Best lard around comes from pork

question & answer

Q. Several European recipes call for lard. Can you tell me if this is made from pork or beef fat or can it be made from both?

A. Presumably lard could be made from beef fat, but most is made from pork fat. There are many ways of making lard. The best is made from leaf-fat, which comes from the pig's abdominal walls. Rendering is done in large, open kettles and, properly prepared, the lard will be clear in color and a bit grainy with a firm texture and a good flavor.

Q. I am curious about the origin of the names of two fruits — grapefruits, which do not resemble grapes, and pineapples, which do not look like apples. Do you know the answer?

A. Grapefruits are so named because they grow in clusters like grapes. Pineapples are so called because the fruit resembles large pine cones, which contain pine nuts.

Christopher Columbus is often credited with naming pineapples. He referred to them as the "pines of the Indies." For what it's worth, the pineapple is known in France as ananas. This derives from an North American Indian word for the fruit.

Q. Many of the Oriental recipes in my files call for grated fresh ginger. I can find the ginger, but when I grate it, I generally wind up with a little juice and lots of stringy fibres. What do you recommend?

A. Unless you have a specially designed ginger grater, I recommend that you peel your ginger and chop it. Slice the ginger first, put it on a flat surface and chop it just as you would onions, garlic and so on.

There is such a thing as a ginger grater. The one in my kitchen is made in China. It resembles a miniature wash board, consisting of several notched parallel strips of wood on which you grate the ginger.

Broiled fish is a basic for beginners

the 60-minute gourmet

The goodness and savor of a dish can never be measured in direct proportion to the time and labor involved in creating it. An expertly executed omelet made with the freshest eggs and a simple filling of, perhaps, a superior cheese can rival beef Wellington or other complicated foods that sometimes require hours to prepare.

The recipe for broiled fish that follows is one that I would most certainly teach a beginner in the kitchen, if teaching was my profession. It is as basic as scrambled eggs and almost as quick and easy to do. Basically, it consists of nothing more than sprinkling skinless, boneless fish fillets with salt and pepper, turning them in melted butter and adding a sprinkling of bread crumbs.

Incidentally, it is best to make your own crumbs from fresh bread rather than use the commercial, seasoned variety. Bread crumbs can be made in seconds in an electric blender or food processor and leftover crumbs keep well for two days.

When ready, the fish will cook under the broiler for two to eight minutes depending on its thickness.

The noodle side dish recommended here, a shortened and greatly simplified version of that popular spaghetti dish called Primavera, will take considerably longer to prepare than the fish, but far less than an hour.

The salad dressing offered here, with Pernod or Ricard, is especially nice with fish. The dressing can be made an hour or two in advance and stirred again at the last moment before the salad is tossed.

POIDDON GRILLE A L'ANGLAISE
(Broiled fish)

4 skinless, boneless fish fillets, about 1¼ pounds, such as flounder, sole or cod
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons fine fresh bread crumbs.

1.Preheat the broiler to high.

2.Sprinkle the fish with salt and pepper to taste. Set aside.

3.Select a flame-proof dish large enough to hold the fish in one layer. Add the butter. Heat under the broiler until the butter melts.

4.Add the fish fillets and turn them over to coat both sides with butter. When ready for broiling, leave the fish pieces skin side down. Sprinkle the top of the fish evenly with bread crumbs.

5.Place under the broiler about five inches from the source of heat. The cooking time will depend on the thickness of the fish. A very thin fillet such as that of a small flounder will cook in about two to four minutes. A one-inch-thick slab of boneless skinless cod will require eight minutes.

Yield: 4 servings.

LES NOUILLES AUPRINTEMPS
(Noodles with vegetables)

½ pound noodles
Salt to taste
4 tablespoons butter
3 cups thinly sliced mushrooms
3 cups thinly sliced zucchini
Freshly ground pepper to taste
½ cup heavy cream
¼ teaspoon grated nutmeg
½ cup freshly grated Parmesan cheese
⅓ cup toasted pine nuts.

1. Bring water to the boil for the noodles. Add salt to taste.

2.Heat the butter in a skillet and add the mushrooms and zucchini. Cook, shaking the skillet and stirring, about one minute or until the vegetables are crisp-tender. Do not overcook.

3.Cook the noodles and drain them.

4.Return the noodles to the kettle and add salt and pepper to taste. Add the vegetables, cream, nutmeg, cheese and pine nuts. Place over low heat. Toss until ingredients are blended and serve.

Yield: 4 servings.

SAUCE SALADE
(Salad Dressing)

1 teaspoon of imported mustard, preferably Dijon
Salt and pepper to taste
1 egg yolk
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
3 or 4 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon Pernod or Ricard.

1. Put the mustard, salt, pepper, egg yolk and vinegar in a mixing bowl. Blend well with a wire whisk.

3.Beat in the Pernod or Ricard.

Yield: 4 Servings.

Concerns over health 'overdone'

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — North American concern about correct nutrition and physical fitness may be exaggerated, the head of the American Medical Association's nutrition department said Tuesday.

"Fear is already a strong determinant of food choices and hope of avoiding heart disease has pushed many people onto the jogging track and into the thickets of vegetarianism," said Dr. Philip L. White, director of the AMA's department of foods and nutrition.

"Too much is being promised in the name of nutrition; too much has been condemned in the name of nutrition, and too much politicking is being done in the name of nutrition. It's no wonder that hardly anyone believes anybody anymore."

Speaking at the convention of the National Food Processors Association, White said the nation is "gripped by hysteria" on the issue of nutrition and health.

"The gist of the new emphasis on nutrition is that if people were to follow certain prescribed dietary patterns, there would be less of the degenerative diseases and people would live longer — and die only of natural causes, until they find a cure for that too, and then we would all die healthy."

White also took a verbal swipe at politicians who push new food labeling procedures, which he says will result in higher prices for food and not necessarily better health.

Beef filet turns out range of the choicest cuts

craig claiborne

There is considerable confusion in the North American public mind as to what is a tournedos, a filet mignon, a chateaubriand, even a whole filet of beef. The reason is that on our menus the terms tournedos and filet mignon are used synonymously.

Each of these cuts is taken from the whole filet of beef. The chateaubriand is the thick, trimmed, center portion. Adjacent to this, going in the direction of the tail end of the filet, are the tournedos. Adjacent to the tournedos and closer to the tail end of the fillet are the true filets mignons. And that portion of the filet that is used for the chateaubriand cut may also be sliced to make tournedos, often called filets mignons. Outlined here are recipes for each of the cuts, including the most famous tournedos dish of all, tournedos Rossini, named, of course, for the composer.

CHATEAUBRIAND GRILLE
(Broiled chateaubriand)

1 trimmed, ready-to-cook chateaubriand, about one and one-quarter pounds
Salt and freshly ground pepper
1 tablespoon peanut, vegetable or corn oil
Bearnaise sauce (see recipe).

1. Preheat the broiler to high.

2. Place the chateaubriand cut side down on a flat surface. Cover with a clean cloth towel and pound with a flat mallet. Turn the chateaubriand, cover with the cloth and pound on the second side. The meat at this point should measure about five inches in diameter and about one and one-half to two inches thick.

3. Sprinkle the meat on both sides with salt and pepper to taste. Brush all over with oil.

4. Place the chateaubriand on a broiler rack. Place it under the broiler so that the top of the meat is only about two inches or slightly less from the source of heat. Broil about five minutes.

5. Turn the meat and continue broiling five minutes.

6. Shift the broiler rack to the bottom of the oven or to a point where the meat will be about 14 inches from the source of heat. Continue broiling about five minutes.

7. Transfer the meat to a carving board and cover with foil to keep warm. Let stand 15 minutes before carving.

8. Carve the chateaubriand and serve with sauce bearnaise.

SAUCE BERANAISE
(A shallot and peppercorn butter sauce)

12 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
½ teaspoon crushed peppercorns
One-third cup red-wine vinegar
1 teaspoon dried tarragon
2 egg yolks
2 tablespoons cold water
Salt
Pinch of cayenne pepper.

1. Let the butter melt over very low heat. Take care that it does not brown or take on color. Pour the butter into a glass measuring cup. Skim off and discard the white foam from the surface. Set aside briefly.

2. Combine the shallots, peppercorns, vinegar and tarragon in a saucepan. Bring to the boil and cook until the wine is totally evaporated. Lent the mixture cool slightly.

3. Add the yolks and water to the shallot and peppercorn mixture. Set the pan in a basin of boiling water. Stir briskly and constantly with a wire whisk until the yolk mixture becomes slightly thickened and foamy. Take care that the yolks do not become overheated or they will scramble.

4. Remove the saucepan from the heat and gradually add the melted butter, stirring rapidly. Do not add the milky sediment that rests in the bottom of the cup. Add salt to taste and the cayenne. This sauce may be strained through a fine sieve if desired.

Yield: About ¾ cup.

EMINCE DE FILET DE BOEUF SAUTE A L'ECHALOTES
(Sauteed fillet of beef with shallots)

16 thin slices of fillet of beef such as filets mignons, about one and one-half pounds
Salt and freshly ground pepper
4 tablespoons butter
4 tablespoons finely chopped shallots
1 tablespoon red-wine vinegar
Finely chopped parsley.

1. Sprinkle the pieces of beef with salt and pepper to taste.

2. Heat two tablespoons butter in a heavy skillet and add the beef slices. Cook about 30 seconds to a side or until quickly browned on both sides. As the pieces cook, transfer them to a warm platter.

3. Add the remaining butter and the shallots to the skillet. Cook about 30 seconds, swirling the shallots in the skillet. Add the vinegar. Bring to the boil. Pour this over the meat.

4. Serve sprinkled with finely chopped parsley.

FILET DE BOEUF ROTI
(Roast fillet of beef)

1 fillet of beef (this includes the chateaubriand and the tournedos), about three and three-quarters pounds trimmed weight
3 tablespoons butter
Salt and freshly ground pepper
¼ cup red-wine vinegar
2 cups sauce bordelaise. (See recipe.)

1. Preheat oven to 450 degrees.

2. Ideally, when ready to cook, the fillet will be about 15 inches long. This will be minus the thin tail end that can be used for sauteeing. Tie the filet in several places crosswise with string.

3. Melt two tablespoons butter in a shallow roasting pan in which the fillet will fit comfortably. Turn the fillet in the butter and sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste.

4. Place the pan over high heat and cook until the butter starts to sizzle sightly. Put the pan in the oven and bake 15 minutes.

5. Turn the fillet and continue baking five minutes.

6. Reduce the oven heat to 415 degrees. Continue baking about 10 to 15 minutes. Remove the beef from the oven and let stand on a carving board, covered, 20 minutes before carving.

7. Pour off the fat from the pan. Place the pan on the stove and add the red-wine vinegar. Cook about one minute, stirring to dissolve the brown particles that cling to the bottom and sides of the pan.

8. Add the bordelaise sauce and stir.

9. Put the sauce through a fine sieve, preferably of the sort known in French kitchens as a chinois.

10. Pour the sauce into a small saucepan, heat briefly and swirl in the remaining tablespoon of butter.

SAUCE BORDELAISE
(A red-wine sauce)

3 tablespoons thinly sliced shallots
1 cup dry red wine, preferably a Bordeaux
2 cups basic meat glaze (see recipe for demi glace).

1. Combine the shallots and wine in a saucepan and bring to the boil. Cook over high heat until all the wine is evaporated.

2. Add the meat glaze and simmer about two minutes.

Yield: Two cups.

DEMI GLACE
(A basic meat glaze)

4 pounds veal bones, cracked
1½ cups coarsely chopped carrots
1½ cups coarsely chopped celery
½ cup coarsely chopped onions
2 cloves garlic, peeled
1 medium-size tomato, coarsely chopped
12 cups water
6 sprigs fresh parsley
2 bay leaves
½ teaspoon dried thyme
Salt
6 peppercorns, crushed.

1. Preheat the broiler.

2. Put the veal bones in one layer in a roasting pan. Place them under the broiler and broil until browned, about five minutes. Turn the pieces and continue broiling about five minutes.

3. Scatter the carrots, celery, onions, garlic and tomato over the bones. Continue broiling about 10 minutes.

4. Transfer the ingredients to a kettle and add the water, parsley sprigs, bay leaves, thyme, salt to taste and peppercorns. Bring to the boil and simmer seven hours.

5. Strain the liquid and discard the solids. There should be about four and one-half to five cups.

6. Put the sauce in a saucepan and continue cooking down about two hours or until reduced to two cups.

Yield: Two cups.

TOURNEDOS ROSSINI

4 tournedos, about six ounces each
Salt and freshly ground pepper
1 tablespoon peanut oil
One-third cup Madeira wine
1 tablespoon truffle liquid, optional
½ cup meat glaze (see recipe for demi glace)
2 tablespoons butter
4 one-inch rounds French bread
4 slices truffled foie gras
4 thin slices black truffles.

1. Place each tournedos on a flat surface. Cover with a clean cloth towel and pound lightly with a flat mallet. Turn each tournedos, cover with the cloth and pound lightly with the mallet. When ready, each fillet should measure about two and one-half to three inches in diameter and should be from about one and one-half to two inches thick.

2. Sprinkle the meat on both sides with salt and pepper to taste.

3. Heat the oil in a heavy skillet and add the tournedos. Cook about four minutes or until well browned on one side. Turn and cook four minutes on the second side.

4. Transfer the meat to a warm platter. Pour off the fat from the skillet.

5. Add the Madeira and, if used, truffle liquid to the skillet. Cook, stirring to dissolve the brown particles that cling to the bottom and sides of the skillet. Cook down to about two tablespoons. Add the meat glaze and cook down to about one-third cup or slightly more. Swirl in one tablespoon butter and remove from the heat.

6. Heat the remaining tablespoon of butter in a small skillet and add the bread. Cook until golden on one side. Turn and cook until golden on the other side. These are croutons.

7. Arrange one crouton on each of four warmed plates. Top each with a tournedos.

8. Top each tournedos with a slice of truffled foie gras. Top each slice of foie gras with a truffle slice.

9. If any juices have accumulated around the meat, add them to the sauce.

10. Spoon about two tablespoons of sauce over each tournedos. Serve immediately.

Yield: Four servings.

Hypochondriacs find all the answers here

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first ever Physicians' Desk Reference for Nonprescription Drugs has an answer for every hypochondriac's prayer and provides the means for consumers who want to cut doctor bills by curing themselves.

The book, published Tuesday, appears at a time when some health insurance companies say 50 percent of all visits to doctors may be unnecessary and when many people are turning to the medicine chest instead of the doctor.

The reference pictures and describes more than 650 lotions, potions, pills, ointments, drops and other over-the-counter medicines. It also contains a guide to self-treatment of everything from jock itch and constipation to indigestion and dandruff.

Most of the half-million first printing is for doctors and pharmacists but a portion has been earmarked for regular folks. Physicians and pharmacists get free copies of the reference with its 312 white, yellow, pink, and blue pages. Others must pay $12.25.

Over-the-counter medicines range from aspirin to cough and cold remedies and concoctions for cuts, scrapes and bruises. Today's OTCs are yesterday's patent medicines and, the book warns, must be used with care.

The guide tells those who treat themselves when not to use a product, such as when ingredients conflict with other medications. It also tells what not to do when taking a product — not to drive, for example, when an ingredient makes you drowsy.

More than 100,000 over-the-counter medical products are available and are fast becoming an inflation-fighting way of treating minor problems. Sales of the OTCs hit a record $5.5 billion last year — up $1 billion since 1977.

The book's descriptions of products are strictly in FDA-approved style, listing active ingredients, symptoms intended to treat, recommended dosage, precautions and what to do in case of overdosage.

Corsican bombings in France

PARIS (UPI) — Nine bombs, planted by Corsican nationalists, exploded today at travel agencies, stores and government buildings in Paris and the port of Nice.

Three persons were slightly injured from flying glass at one of the seven explosions in Paris. No one was injured in the two bomb attacks in Nice.

All the attacks were claimed by the Corsican National Liberation Front in telephone calls to the French news media. The Front seeks independence for Corsica, which has been under French rule for 212 years.

Five of the Paris explosions came shortly after midnight in working class neighborhoods. The worst damage was at an Air France ticket office where the injuries occurred.

'Rattling' windmill slowed

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The world's newest and largest windmill has been ordered by the U.S. government to restrict operations because it shakes cups and saucers and rattles windows for miles around.

"It makes what has been described as an annoying swishing noise, a most unexpected phenomenon," the Department of Enregy's Dan Ancona said of the 2,000-kilowatt windmill DOE put into service last year at Boone, N.C. "Noise was one problem that was never foreseen as being significant."

Foreseen or not, the windmill's 200-foot-long rotary blades will no longer turn early in the morning, or night or on weekends, while DOE and its consultants struggle to find out what's making the noise and move to correct it.

"The swish-swish noise is the audible component of the low-frequency sound the blades are generating," Ancona said. "But what the people of Boone are really hearing is their windows and other objects in the homes rattling from the vibrations of this sound."

Elvis's pharmacist suspended

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An ailing Memphis pharmacist who dispensed nearly 10,000 pills and injections for the late rock 'n' roll king Elvis Presley agreed Tuesday to give up his state licence rather than face a hearing.

Appearing before the state Board of Pharmacy at its request, Irving Jack Kirsch agreed to an order revoking his licence as a pharmacist and the licence of his pharmacy, The Prescription House. The agreement puts him out of business.

It was the maximum penalty available to the Board of Pharmacy.

Kirsch was accused of filling too many prescriptions written by Dr. George Nichopoulos, Presley's personal physician. Among other things, the board said Kirsch "knew, or should have known, that the aforementioned patient, Elvis Presley, had a serious drug problem."

The complaint said Kirsch failed to exercise professional responsibility "not to fill or allow to be filled prescriptions which he knew or should have known were not issued . . . for any legitimate medical purpose."

The state Board of Medical Examiners, which could have revoked Nichopoulos' licence, suspended it on Jan. 19 for 90 days. He resumed practice Monday.

Park reopens after injuries

MONTREAL (CP) — Belmont Park, an amusement park in the city's north-end where three children suffered serious injuries in two separate accidents on rides last summer, is ready to re-open under new management.

Paul Pappas, the park's new director, said his children will be the first this year to try the park's rides, which were all recently overhauled at a cost of $30,000 as part of a $1-million refurbishing program.

Diamond suspect freed

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli police Tuesday released their only suspect in last week's $4-million diamond robbery after he passed a lie-detector test.

Nissim Ashkenazi, 28, was arrested in the Israel Diamond Exchange six hours after a lone bandit armed with a pistol and a hand grenade took several packets of gems from the office of a diamond merchant.

Ashkenazi said he was in the building hanging wallpaper and a police spokesman said the lie detector indicated he was telling the truth. The victimized merchant who had identified the suspect also passed a lie-detector test, she said.

Friday's robbery was the largest in Israel's history.

Bandits heist half a million

INWOOD, N.Y. (AP) — A gang of bandits made off with $500,000 after holding up an armored truck Tuesday that was loading money for transfer from a New York City-area bank, authorities said.

Nassau County police said five men were believed to have taken part in the robbery outside the European-American Bank here. They fled in a station wagon, later found abandoned at a nearby railway station.

The money was being transferred from the bank to a truck belonging to Purolator Security, Inc.

Use This Home Recipe Plan to Lose Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of bulky unsightly fat right in your own home. Use this recipe plan yourself. It's easy — no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full twice a day and follow the Naran plan.

If your first purchase does not show you the simple, easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't seem to disappear almost like magic from neck, chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow the easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears — how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) — South African police used tear gas and charges with riot sticks to disperse colored (mixed race) students protesting against racially segegated schools near here today, a police spokesman said.

He denied an earlier report by school officials that warning shots were fired in one of two incidents near Johannesburg's black satellite city of Soweto — scene of the bloody 1976 riots which started in black schools.

Soweto Police Chief Brig. Kobuas Hamman said three tear-gas canisters were fired and five black policemen used batons to disperse about 500 students gathered on a school football ground near Soweto.

The students scattered and returned to school.

Half an hour later police intercepted about 300 colored students marching from another school in the Soweto area. Once again the students scattered and returned to school, Hamman said.

The police chief said attempts by a school inspector with a loudhailer to persuade the two groups to disperse failed — also contradicting earlier reports from school officials.

Death toll among aged up to 24

DIJON, France (AP) — Three more old people died from fire injuries early today, raising to 24 the number of bedridden pensioners killed in a deliberately set blaze in a retirement home, police said.

The three who died during the night were among 17 who suffered injuries in the fire at Saint-Jean-de-Losne near here in eastern France.

Yacht sets round-world record

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — Lone yachtsman David Scott Cowper sailed home to two round-the-world records today, 249 days after setting out virtually unnoticed in his 12-metre-long craft Ocean Bound.

A yacht club cannon marked the voyage's end, and a hero's welcome awaited as Scott Cowper, 38, put into the Plymouth harbor a full day ahead of the late Sir Francis Chichester's 1967 non-stop record of 226 days at sea.

The quiet surveyor from Newcastle, England, also knocked 23 days off the 272-day total voyage record set by Dame Naomi James in 1978. That record included days at sea and at port.

"I'm broke but happy," said Scott Cowper as he held his 21-month-old son Freddie, much grown since they last saw each other. "This trip has cost me an absolute fortune but it's been worth every penny."

Despite more than 48 hours without sleep Scott Cowper looked fresh and fit as he stepped off his $176,000 blue boat and into the arms of his wife Caroline, 35.

While waiting for her husband's return she had told reporters: "He's a very determined man. When he sets his mind to a thing he just goes right out and does it. But I'll have to start nagging if he decides to go on another voyage like this."

During his trip, Scott Cowper survived a near-capsize in mountainous seas, was "buzzed" by Russian ships off South America, wallowed becalmed in the doldrums and was plagued by steering gear and radio faults.

CRASH LANDING was the result of stuntman Gerald Stoeckli's attempt to jump 50 meters with a car and trailer at Geneva, Switzerland. A frequent performer of stuntcar ticks in Europe, Stoeckli took his trailer as the result of a bet. While car and trailer were writeoffs, Stoeckli was uninjured.

Iran defiant as Europe backs U.S. with sanctions

The Associated Press

Major European allies of the United States ordered token action against Iran now and threatened strong sanctions May 17 if the release of the 53 U.S. hostages is not in sight by then. Washington was disappointed and Iran defiant, threatening the West with a permanent oil ban and tilting toward Moscow.

The foreign ministers of the nine Common Market countries announced after a two-day meeting in Luxembourg Tuesday their governments were banning new export and service contracts with Iran and all military sales to Iran. They also plan to reduce their diplomatic staffs in Tehran, cut Iranian diplomatic staffs in their capitals,and reimpose visa requirements for Iranians travelling to their countries.

The ministers said if there was not "decisive progress leading to the release of the hostages" by May 17, their governments would impose the economic sanctions called for in the UN Security Council resolution vetoed by the Soviet Union in January.

Such action would halt all exports from the nine countries to Iran except food and medicine, cutting an estimated $7 billion in sales annually.

The foreign ministers' communique made no mention of stopping purchases of Iranian oil, now running about 650,000 barrels a day. But they reportedly agreed to ban buying of Iranian oil at prices higher than the levels of the rest of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Since Iran is demanding $35 a barrel, $2.50 above the top OPEC price, this amounts to a ban on new oil contracts of spot sales.

Iran on Monday suspended shipment of the 530,000 barrels of oil Japan imported daily because the Japanese refused to pay the price. The Japanese government is to decide Thursday what steps it will take to help get the hostages freed, and Tokyo's leaders have indicated they will go along with the Common Market's plan.

The communique did not define the term "decisive progress," and there appeared to be disagreement what was meant. The British foreign secretary, Lord Carrington, told a news conference the Iranian government would have to do more than take custody of the hostages from the militants who occupied the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4 and continue to hold 50 of the captives there. The three others are held at the Iranian Foreign Ministry.

But Italian Foreign Minister Emilpo Colombo said he believed transfer of control would be enough.

The U.S. state department said it welcomed the Common Market's decision to support the U.S. government's efforts to free the hostages. But Carter administration sources were obviously disappointed in the delay in full sanctions.

This "was a typical European decision," one official who would not be quoted by name said. "It postpones the crunch."

U.S. President Carter has said he may take military measures if the hostages are not freed by mid-May, and U.S. officials said the prospect of European sanctions taking effect at that time would put pressure on him to defer his decision.

Iran's oil minister, Ali Akbar Moinfar, said any nation supporting U.S. sanctions "would be blacklisted forever and would never get Iran's oil," and Iran's economic affairs minister, Reza Salimi, said the Soviet Union has agreed to let Iran use its roads if the United States blockades Iran's southern water routes.

Salimi also said Iran will reach an agreement soon on the price of the natural gas it will sell the Russians, and the official Pars news agency reported today that Iran increased oil sales to Soviet-bloc member Romania from 100,000 to 160,000 barrels daily under a contract signed Sunday.

Meanwhile, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's revolutionary regime continued to struggle with violent opposition on its campuses and in rebellious Kurdistan, in northwest Iran.

Tehran Radio reported five persons killed Tuesday in clashes at the university in Rasht. It said three persons were killed Monday at Tehran University, five at Ahwaz University and one at Sistan-and-Baluchistan University.

Sixteen persons also were reported killed in fighting between rebels and government forces in northwest Kurdistan.

Argentina accused on rights

BUENOS AIRES (Reuter) — The Inter-American Human Rights Commission has denounced Argentina's government for what it called large-scale violation of human rights, including torture, kidnapping and murder.

The commission, set up by the Organization of American States, visited Argentina last September and hundreds of people reported the disappearance of friends and relatives, saying that security forces kidnapped them.

The conclusions of the report were released by the foreign ministry without explanation.

BEAR HUGS come with kisses, five-year-old Martina discovered when she visited the Berlin Zoo, and while she was prepared to hug the bear, she wasn't prepared for the snuffly kisses she got from the three-month-old cub. Until the cub is too large, it lives in a park where the animals can be petted.

GM earnings plunge 88%, worst since oil embargo

DETROIT (AP) — An 88-per-cent plunge in first-quarter profits reported by General Motors Corp. was the worst comparison with the previous year's first quarter since the dark days of the 1973-74 oil embargo.

The biggest U.S. automaker said Tuesday it earned $155.7 million or 52 cents a share in the first three months of the year compared with $1.26 billion or $4.39 a share in last year's first quarter.

The decline of 88 per cent eclipsed the 86-per-cent drop between the first quarters of 1973 and 1974, when earnings fell from $2.84 a share to 41 cents.

Worldwide revenue fell 12 per cent to $15.7 billion from $17.9 billion. Vehicle sales to dealers fell to 2.03 million from 2.47 million, an 18-per-cent drop.

Profits were hurt by price-cutting in the form of customer and dealer rebates, a disproportionate decline in profitable large-car and truck sales and operating inefficencies resulting from production reductions, chairman Thomas Murphy and president Elliott Estes said in the earnings statement.

Profits will be hurt over the short term because of inflation, economic uncertainty, high interest rates and high fuel prices, they said.

In terms of 1967 purchasing power, the $155-million profit was equivalent to a loss of $102 million or 36 cents a share, they said.

GM is so large that profits of $155 million for a quarter represent a return on the stockholders' investment of 0.8 per cent, equivalent to about 3.3 per cent per year. The profit margin on sales was only 1.0 per cent compared with 7.0 per cent in last year's first quarter and 4.4 per cent for last year as a whole.

GM will be alone among the Big Three U.S. automakers in showing a profit in the first quarter.

Chrysler is laying off nearly 7,000 workers over the next few weeks.

In a long-awaited announcement Tuesday, Chrysler said it was idling 6,900 workers, some of them hourly employees in non-production jobs, beginning today. That amounts to a 19.7 percent reduction of Chrysler's already depleted salaried work force.

The reductions, which Chrysler said will be carried out in the next few weeks, "are a necessary response to the deteriorating market for all cars and trucks.'' A Chrysler spokesman said the action will reduce internal costs by $200 million a year.

Chrysler, which expects to lose $750 million this year, already has closed four plants and laid off 42,200 hourly workers in the United States. Additional plant closings are under study.

Kennedy nips past Carter in Pa. primary

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Senator Edward Kennedy squeaked past President Carter early today to capture a Pennsylvania presidential primary so close that the winner and the loser wound up almost evenly splitting the state's Democratic nominating votes.

George Bush beat Ronald Reagan, 54 per cent to 45 per cent, in the Republican primary and said of his catchup campaign: "It's working." Reagan said he couldn't envision Bush overtaking him now.

The victory was crucial for Kennedy to nurse along his shaken, big-state strategy in the challenge to Carter. Even Jody Powell, White House press secretary, said it would "certainly be a boost to him."

But the margin — Kennedy had 47 per cent of the vote, Carter 45 per cent — did nothing to shake the president's firm command in the competition that counts most — for delegates. Kennedy got 94 Pennsylvania delegates; Carter 91.

Carter emerged from Pennsylvania with 1,038 of the 1,666 votes it will take to win the Democratic nomination. Kennedy had 569.

Reagan called the preferential primary "a meaningless horse race." The former California governor said he won what he sought, nominating delegates.

Republican delegates were not identified with candidates, and were officially uncommitted. Reagan predicted that at least 50 of the 83 Pennsylvania delegates would cast their nominating votes for him.

Bush, trailing by a margin of more than 4-to-1 in total delegate strength, said he doesn't believe Reagan is too far ahead to be beaten.

Kennedy 666,708 or 47 per cent.

Carter 644,314 or 45 per cent.

Six percent of the vote was uncommitted, 2 per cent went to California Gov. Edmund Brown, no longer a candidate.

Bush 534,975 or 54 per cent.

Reagan 451,056 or 45 per cent.

Representative John Anderson of Illinois was getting one per cent of the Republican vote on write-in ballots. Anderson is on the verge of independent presidential candidacy.

Bank robbed on way to altar

CASTRO VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — The bride-to-be, en route to a Lake Tahoe area chapel, had her plans for wedding bells shattered by the clatter of a bank alarm.

Patricia Valencia, said Alameda County Sheriff's deputies, told her fiance she needed to make a quick stop last Saturday to withdraw money from a savings account to help cover honeymoon expenses.

Jimmy Feo pulled his van over outside World Savings and Loan Association in this suburban community across the bay from San Francisco, deputies said.

Ms. Valencia ran inside and deputies say she handed a teller a note demanding money. The teller pushed an alarm button, and the woman ran outside.

Sheriff's deputies said she jumped in the back of the van and told Feo to take her to a restroom.

Ms. Valencia, 36, was arraigned on bank robbery charges Monday and was jailed in lieu of $15,000 bail.

Smallpox case suspected

MILAN, Italy (AP) — Health officials in the Lombardy region today reported what they said was the world's first case of smallpox in three years, but national and international health authorities expressed some doubt.

Lombardy health officials said Italian engineer Umberto Moretti, 32, developed smallpox symptoms after returning from a business trip in Indonesia.

But the Italian health ministry in Rome was skeptical that Moretti actually contracted smallpox. Ministry officials said he had been vaccinated several times and his illness was not taking a normal course.

At WHO headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland, spokesman Gino Levy also was doubtful, saying: "It's probably a case of chicken pox. But at this time we cannot really say anything."

Rosy start for Mac-Blo's year

VANCOUVER (CP) — MacMillan Bloedel Ltd. began 1980 the same way it ended 1979: in record fashion.

B.C.'s largest forest products company reported record sales and other income of $619 million in the first quarter of 1980, surpassing the previous high of $569 million in the final quarter of 1979.

Calvert Knudsen, president and chief executive officer of the company, told shareholders at the annual meeting that although 1980 appears to be a year of economic downturn, the future looks bright for MacMillan Bloedel shareholders.

"Barring some economic or physical calamity, the future is bright for (the company) for the 1980s," Knudsen said.

But Knudsen cautioned that although 1980 has started with a record quarter, 1980 is not expected to be as good as last year's record performance.

He said North American markets for building materials have dropped sharply recently because of high interest rates while overseas markets have remained firm.

Knudsen said he was confident the company could make the 1980s a success despite the current economic downturn.

Knudsen said the company plans to spend $90 million during the next five years on reforestation programs and predicted the company will have as much timber as it needs by the year 2020.

Net earings for the first quarter were $44.7 million, or $2.04 a common share, up from $40.7 million or $1.85 a share in the first quarter of 1979.

The Vancouver-based firm also said cash flow reached a new high for the first quarter of $87 million or $4.09 a common share, compared to $71.1 million or $3.34 a share during the same period last year.

Knudsen announced that Bruce Howe, executive vice-president, operations, will become president and chief operating officer. Knudsen will become chairman and chief executive officer and Ernie Richardson, current chairman, becomes vice-chairman.

The changes are being made to ensure a smooth transition when Richardson retires in 1981.

Dead miners' kin beat boss to death

SEOUL (Reuter) — Angry relatives beat a mine boss to death in the eastern coal mining village of Kuchol after the deaths of two miners who were entombed after a roof fall, police said Wednesday. Police said three relatives on their way to pay respects to the deceased at the morgue Tuesday entered the house of the mine boss, dragged him from his bed and beat him so severely he died later in hospital.

Sally Ann canvassers sought

The Salvation Army wants people willing to canvas the western community for its May 5 door-to-door campaign.

About 3,000 volunteers have already been enlisted in Greater Victoria but campaign chairman George Easdon says more help is needed.

A report from federal Solicitor-General Robert Kaplan regarding possible wrongdoing by the RCMP in the province is unintelligible, says Attorney-General Allan Williams.

The report was to inform Williams of possible dirty tricks by the B.C. contingent uncovered by the McDonald royal commission into the federal force's activities.

Relevant testimony was received by provincial authorities last week before being released publicly, Williams said. But the report was devoid of useful identifying details, the minister said.

"The copy that arrived was full of black lines. The transcripts were full of information that had been deleted."

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, Kaplan said he might, if asked, supply names of RCMP officers involved in potentially questionable activity.

Gem firm robbed

LOS ANGELES (Reuter) — Two gunmen stole gems and jewellery valued at a million dollars from a jewellery firm today after tieing up four persons, police said. They said the two men entered the offices of J and B Gems, drew guns after moving out of view of television monitors.

Media, politicians manipulating news?

The media and politicians manipulate the news for their own purposes and should be better controlled, Stephen Clarkson, a University of Toronto political science professor, said here Tuesday.

Televison, in particular, but newspapers too have an impact on the Canadian political process which isn't always positive and which isn't fully understood by many people, Clarkson told the Men's Canadian Club.

Clarkson, the former husband of television journalist Adrienne Clarkson, spoke on: "Democracy in Canada — Is it Strengthened or Weakened by the Media?"

He said political parties should be required to distribute full election platform information, in booklet form, rather than the present system of having taxpayers subsidize party advertising campaigns. He also suggested a debate between party leaders be required at election time.

Television is perceived by the public to be the most authoritative source of news, he said, because of the "one-picture-is-worth-a-thousand-words" theory.

But television also gets the most criticism because of its style of news gathering and presentation.

Television, he said, needs short, colorful news items and the tendency is for serious political dialogue to be sacrificed for that.

Appearance has become more important than substance, he said, using the example of the televised debate between presidential candidates John Kennedy and Richard Nixon.

That debate, one of the first of its kind, is often considered one of the deciding factors in the outcome of the election, he said.

"Those who watched it on television said Kennedy won because Nixon was sweating and looked terrible because of the pancake make-up he was wearing to hide his five-o'clock shadow. But those who heard it on the radio said Nixon had won because he presented his comments in a better manner and had a deeper voice."

Clarkson also knocked the media for its selection of newsworthy subjects.

He cited the example of an election campaign photograph of Robert Stanfield fumbling a football. The photograph appeared in almost every major newspaper in Canada in spite of the fact that dozens of other photographs of him catching the football were taken at the same time.

He said similar incidents occurred in Joe Clark's campaigns. In one situation two newsmen were overheard talking, one suggesting that Clark, who was reviewing troops at an overseas military base, be manoeuvred into backing into a bayonet.

Elections used to be an opportunity for the public to tell politicians what it wanted. Political parties and local candidates used to play an important role in the exchange of dialogue between the public and the politicians, he said.

But now with the advent of almost immediate communication more emphasis has been put on party leaders. The party and individual local candidates are in the background.

He said he checked January and February issues of the Colonist and discovered only three pieces about local candidates on the front page during that period.

He said events in an election campaign are staged for the media. Consequently, meetings are held so candidates may be shown making speeches in front of audiences but in fact those audiences are only made up of party members.

The intent no longer is to speak to the public, he said, but to present an image that can be relayed by the media.

Gas $3 a gallon

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israel raised the price of gasoline 36 percent to $3.05 a gallon, an indication of the country's problems in paying for imported oil. The increase was announced just before midnight Tuesday night to minimize the last-minute surge of motorists filling up at the old price. Another hefty increase is expected by summer.

High standards noted at music festival so far

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Five days have sped by in the Greater Victoria Music Festival which started last week with ethnic, Highland and school dance sessions and has continued this week with piano, speech and vocal.

The next eight days will see strings, wind instruments, choral and bands added.

Adjudicators have noted a uniformly good standard in most of what has been seen and heard so far.

The first pianists' open class (20th century music) Tuesday, revealed exceptionally mature and technically sound playing that was on a consistent level. It was so consistent there were three runners-up — Jonas Kvarnstrom, Monica Pfau and Gladys Lau — tied with one mark behind winner Kevin Fitz-Gerald's 88.

There must be a considerable number of people in this city who would find pleasure in attending these events if they understood their nature. The old-fashioned festival concept is as dead as a pogo stick.

No one is stuck nowadays with having to listen to the same piece played a dozen or so times. Listeners can even choose beforehand the period of music that is their particular favorite.

In piano, for example, almost every class is nominated as Haydn-Mozart, Romantic, Bach, Baroque, Impressionistic, Classical, Canadian and so on. And within those categories it's strictly "own choice."

So each session of each day presents a wide variety of music. And it is perfectly true that so far there has not been a bad performance while there has been an impressive number of notable ones.

Speech and studio dance opened the week Monday, the former at St. Matthias Church hall where for many sessions there was standing room only. Speech has drawn the largest number of entries in several years, extending over five full days.

Dance is at Oak Bay Junior Secondary and the first day produced three outstanding performances: Carolyn Crampton's jazz solo for 17 and under, achieved an 89 and Eugenie Ngai was awarded 90 for a charming ballet solo in the 14 and under class. Tiny Jodi Sing, in 11 and under, performed a crisp and lively tap solo for which she also achieved a 90.

School and ethnic dance is graded from Excellent to Fair. In the school dance section Glanford School which had 10 entries, more than any other participating school, received nine ratings of Excellent and one Very Good.

Excellent ratings were also won three times by Brentwood College and twice by Torquay. Willows School had an Excellent and a Very Good for two entries, and Excellent was also accorded Monterey primary, Glenlyon primary, Fairburn and Renaissance.

In ethnic dance an outstanding solo performance in the under 14 national dance category by Maria Elena Rodriguez, and an entry by Dance Village in the open class, brought Excellent ratings.

Major awards made so far are: the Aldyn Hamber Chapter IODE senior award of $25 to accordionist Gregory Gurr; the Kiwanis Club of Saanich senior award of $25 to Michelle Ossege, and the Victoria Music Festival junior award, $25, to Petra Bangemann.

Greenhouse an inspiration

An amateur's greenhouse on a sunny spring day is an inspiration. Every flat and pot is sprouting seedlings. Plans have to be made for taking care of dozens of young plants while they are growing slowly to the stage of being planted into the open garden.

Optimism is the keynote, for everything in a greenhouse relates to life and life depends on the sun with its light.

However, in a small conventional glass and wood structure, too much sun may cause wilting and even scorching of young seedlings. We must devise temporary shade in some spots that will give less direct sunlight without reducing warmth and sunlight in other parts of the greenhouse.

Old fashioned cheesecloth was ideal, but today is hard to get and high priced when found. Other loosely woven materials such as old curtains can be used, draped over seed flats on pieces of wood nailed upright on the bench edges.

The shading material must be easily movable for it is used only for temporary shading as needed over certain flats. Loosely woven material allows free air circulation while breaking the sun's rays.

The air of a greenhouse on sunny spring days should have a lively quality that is pleasant for both human and plants, neither too hot nor laden with moisture. There should be a circulation of outside air which moves from end to end of the structure without a draught, and in the process it will tend to hold humidity at a suitable level.

Doors and vents should be opened gradually on a sunny day, in succession, so that the air change is gradual. Usually a sunny morning follows a clear night which results in a touch of frost for two hours across sunrise. The early morning air will be cool but the greenhouse will quickly heat with the rising sun and vents can be opened starting at about 8 a.m. to avoid sudden build-up of heat.

At the other end of a sunny spring day, closing vents about 4 p.m. aids in retaining warmth in wood flats, benches, and in the wood part of the structure. This warmth is gradually given off into the greenhouse air as the outdoor warmth decreases, thus prolonging the hours of sun warmth by residual heat, without resorting to artificial heat.

This system of storing the sun's heat is the principle being explored in solar greenhouses.

A most practical example is being worked out by a group of enthusiasts connected with the Fernwood Community Centre whose new building was formally opened last Saturday, April 19. A solar greenhouse is already in operation on a site almost opposite the new centre.

The structure is using recycled materials wherever possible, and this must consume endless hours of labor in preparing the material for its new use. However with the enthusiasm evident on Saturday, the project already has wooden flats of seedlings on wood benches; sown on April 14, many flats had generous sprouts and some formed seedlings on the fifth day, even though the "collection panel" was still only about one-third constructed.

This "heating panel" is being composed of brown bottles of heated rock salt water in a sloping rack to catch maximum sunrays coming through the fibreglass and heavy plastic on the opposite sloping wall which faces south. On this part of the island we are aware how sea water holds sun's warmth overnight, preventing sunrise frost in nearby gardens.

Insulation material has been used in wall spaces and beneath the brick floor made of recycled brick over sand which in turn rests on more insulation material for extra warmth and storage of sun warmth.

This project is a two-way thing; if you visit it you will get ideas which may help you, and you in turn may have greenhouse or plant growing experience to share with those who are developing this new concept of gardening. There is an adjacent area already being started as vegetable gardens.

Turn off Cook Street at North Park, and then turn on to Chambers Street. You will welcome encouragement and a sharing of ideas on greenhouses.

Anti-nuke march

VANCOUVER (CP) — Nuclear protesters will take part in an anti-nuclear march and rally Saturday in Vancouver and other B.C. communities, says a spokesman for the Vancouver Coalition for a Non Nuclear World.

Coalition member Jill Bend said protests also are planned for Rock Creek in the Kootenay, Port Alberni and Nanaimo on Vancouver Island as well as Surrey on the Lower Mainland.

She said anti-nuclear organizers will zero in on planned twin nuclear plants near Sedro Woolley, Wash., the Trident nuclear submarine base at Bangor, Wash., and nuclear warheads stored at the Canadian Forces Base Comox.

Critical comments on carillon don't ring true

Provincial carilloneur Herman Bergink thinks Piet de Groot is a ding-dong.

Piet de Groot, who said he is visiting here from the Netherlands, said in a letter to the editor in the Times Tuesday: "Please believe me when I say that Victoria's carillon is most sadly out of tune. It is in fact the worst out-of-tune carillon that I have ever heard."

Not true, Bergink fired back today, claiming his instrument's collection of 62 bronze bells — the largest in Canada — is considered one of the finest carillons in the world.

"The guy doesn't know what he's talking about," Bergink said. "He can't have heard too many carillons."

He denied the carillon is out of tune, and said master carilloneur Leen 'tHart, director of the Netherlands Carillon School at Amersfoort, comes to Victoria once a year for one or two recitals and he doesn't find it out of tune.

Bergink said he could send de Groot to carillons in The Netherlands that are really out of tune.

He said carillon bells are tuned at the foundry where they are made and not on site.

Bergink, thankful for small mercies, says he appreciates de Groot's comment that he is an excellent carilloneur.

Meanwhile, the latest reports on another venerable Victoria institution — the Empress — indicate that its kitchen facilities will make it past the health inspectors after all.

Health inspectors indicated earlier that unless improvements were made to the hotel, a civic luncheon May 2 for Princess Alexandra, Queen Elizabeth's cousin, would be cancelled.

A hotel spokesman now says it expects to have the problem solved later this week and plans for the luncheon are going ahead.

British wild about TV's Dallas

LONDON (AP) — More than 18 million Britons are anxiously waiting for the fall to bring them the answers to two burning questions.

Who shot J. R. and was he killed?

The BBC, which sent North American TV audiences The Forsyte Saga and Upstairs Downstairs, is reeling from the success of Dallas, the chief U.S. contribution to the British cultural scene during the 1979-80 season.

"It is undoubtedly the most popular American TV series ever shown in Britain," said BBC-TV spokesman Keith Samuel. "I would say we now have a nation of Dallas addicts on our hands."

Said the The Daily Express in a tongue-in-cheek editorial: "Withdrawal symptoms are bound to set in to such an extent that Britain could clearly be facing its darkest hour.

"Clearly the cabinet should now convene in emergency session, forget about budgets and inflation, and debate the crucial matter of the moment — how are they going to get us all through the summer months without the man we love to hate, J. R. Himself?"

Britons are not alone on this side of the Atlantic in their devotion to J. R., Miss Ellie and the Ewing clan.

Rating race won by CBS in upset

NEW YORK (UPI) — CBS won the television ratings race for the 1979-80 season Tuesday in one of the biggest upsets since David kayoed Goliath.

ABC, which had won last year and had been considered a sure bet to repeat, lost by 0.1 of a rating point in the statistics computed by the A.C. Nielsen Co.

The highest rated show for the season was the CBS news magazine 60 Minutes.

The ratings for the 1979-80 season were: CBS, 19.6; ABC, 19.5 and NBC, 17.4. For the 1978-79 season, ABC won with a 20.9 rating, CBS was second with 18.7 and NBC was last with 17.0.

Industry sources estimate that CBS and ABC, in the final weeks of the season, spent close to $20 million for that 0.1 advantage.

During the 31-week season, CBS won top ratings in 17 weeks, ABC took 12 weeks and NBC captured two weeks. Last year, ABC won 25 weeks of the season, ABC and CBS tied for two weeks, CBS won three, and NBC took two.

The top 10 shows for the season give a heavy advantage to CBS, which took eight of the top ten spots. ABC took two and NBC had none.

The top ten shows for the 1979-80 season, according to the Nielsen list, were: 1: 60 Minutes (CBS); 2: Three's Company (ABC); 3: That's Incredible (ABC); 4: M-A-S-H (CBS); 5: Alice (CBS); 6: Dallas (CBS); 7: Flo (CBS); 8: The Jeffersons (CBS); 9: The Dukes of Hazzard (CBS); 10: One Day At A Time (CBS).

Made for television movies also contributed to the CBS win. The network had the top rated TV movie of the season in Kenny Rogers as The Gambler, and the top rated mini-series in the two-part Guyana Tragedy: The Story of Jim Jones.

Publisher tells how TV can be improved

TORONTO (CP) — The quality of Canadian television can be improved without government-imposed content regulations, the publisher of The Globe and Mail says.

A. Roy Megarry told the Canadian Film Television Association that the CBC should contract out all its non-news and public affairs programming to independent producers.

Instead of Canadian content regulations, Megarry suggested a plan which would force commercial networks to spend a fixed percentage of their budgets on Canadian-made programs.

Although the number of hours of Canadian content might decrease, the quality of productions would improve, he said.

Megarry also suggested that commercial and pay-TV productions be given the same kind of tax breaks now offered to feature films.

Megarry said he was adamantly opposed to cable companies, existing TV networks or even film producers being given the franchise for pay-TV.

He said CBC and the private networks already have secure niches and do not need their monopolies extended.

Instead, Megarry favors awarding the pay-TV franchise to a large private corporation or private individual and said there should be as few restrictions as possible imposed on pay-TV by the government.

Opening lead — jack of spades.

It stands to reason that the more opportunities you give a defender to make a mistake the more often he will accommodate you. Good dummy play may therefore be said to include not only good technique but also the ability to induce errors by the defense.

Consider this deal where South bids six hearts and West leads a spade. Declarer wins in dummy and cashes the K-A of trumps, East showing out. The contract is now in danger because, on top of a trump loser, South might lose a club trick.

There may be a temptation to rely solely on a favorable diamond division — since the suit may be divided 3-3 or either defender may have the singleton or doubleton jack of diamonds. In all three of these cases, declarer could discard his club loser on dummy's fourth diamond.

But it would be a mistake to tackle the diamonds at this point. It is better to put West on lead, because he might not choose the best line of defense. Accordingly, after cashing the ace of spades, declarer leads a trump to West's queen.

Now let's imagine you're West and see only dummy's hand and your own. You'd know you can't afford a spade return, because that would surely give declarer a ruff and discard. You would therefore lead either a diamond or a club.

It's impossible for you to know at this point that a club lead is safe and a diamond lead is fatal. All indications point to a low diamond as the much safer play. This loses only when South has the Q-10 of diamonds, while a club return loses whenever South has the K-J-10, K-J-x or K-10-x of clubs.

Since there are more club combinations than diamond combinations that could hand declarer the slam, you (West) are much more likely to lead a diamond at trick seven. If you do, unfortunately it costs you a slam.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Thursday, April 24, 1980
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Check facts— strive for balance, moderation. You could be on brink of major discovery. Don't force issues. Someone is going to provide pertinent information and you need only to be receptive. A co-worker figures prominently.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Wave "goodbye" to lethargy. Spotlight on significant change, intensified relationship. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure in scenario. Imprint style, emphasize creativity. Give logic equal time with emotions. Member of opposite sex pays meaningful compliment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Insist on accurate appraisals. Be aware of limitations and property rights. Avoid extremes, build on solid base, check rules, regulations. Get promises in writing. Be aware of hidden clauses, fine print. Cancer person can be a valuable ally.

CANCER (June 21-JULY 22): Accent personality, movement, personal appearances and verification of answers. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius persons figure prominently. A short trip could prove fruitful. Member of opposite sex has plans for you. Know it and prepare accordingly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spotlight on luxury, budgeting holiday, beautifying surroundings, making intelligent concession to family member. Accent on personal possessions, income potential and receipt of a surprise gift. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons figure in scenario.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Circumstances favor your efforts. Judgement, intuition and timing are on target. Emphasize self-reliance. Make new starts in new directions. Your sales ability is heightened. Perfect techniques. Insist on definition of terms. Steer clear of self-deception.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You get behind scenes and resolve dilemma. Emphasis on production, creativity, and reward for special abilities. Cancer, Capricorn persons figure prominently. In matters of speculation, stick with number 8. Older individual lends benefit of experience.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finish what you start — you are on right track, despite protestations from envious associates. Perceive potential. Improve display and distribution of products. Aries, Libra natives figure in your personal scenario. A burden will be removed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Opportunity exists to move towards goal. Take initiative, stress independence of thought and action. Leo, Aquarius natives figure prominently. Accept challenge, imprint style and be ready for "emotional involvement." Avoid lifting heavy objects.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Good lunar aspect coincides now with long-range plans, submission of manuscript and journey which aids in fulfilling aspirations. Collect and file information. Open lines of communication. You will overcome distance, language barrier.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): What seems a tangle of confusion will unravel in your favor. You do have right to be optimistic. Discuss money with one close to you. It is time to expand base of operations. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure prominently.

PISCES(Feb. 19-March 20): Choose steady course in contrast to sensationalism. Emphasis on public relations, partnerships, legal agreements and marital status. Aquarius, Taurus persons figure prominently. Be receptive to ideas proposed by close associate or mate.

IF APRIL 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you have unusual voice, an abundance of charm and you can get your way through display of diplomacy. You have excellent taste where jewelry, art and luxury items are concerned. You tend to have a "sweet tooth," and should make an effort to comprehend nutritional needs. Taurus, Libra, Scorpio persons play important roles in your life. New contacts prove lucky for you in 1980. You are determined, stubborn and sexy. You're due for "amazing" breakthrough to success.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"That's wrong," said Joe, pointing to an entry in the ledger. "The same three digits but you've reversed their order."

Steve looked. "You're right. What a stupid mistake!" he exclaimed. "So I made it just one less than twice what it should be."

What was that?

(Answer tomorrow)

Yesterday's answer: BABY was 1613.

NEAR THE BAY!!
One of Victoria's long established family businesses. Good film lease, with 5 year option. A steady year round business with little seasonal fluctuation. Listen to this. The husband works about 5 hours a day, 3 days a week. The wife has to put in full time only the other 3 days. Business can be increased substantially through promotion. This business earns owners about $48,000 a year! Call

HOW TO WRITE

A GOOD

CLASSIFIED ACTION

AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably by giving complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. Monday through Friday, 8:00 to 5:30 p.m. Saturday. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

Athletes' Olympic dreams lie shattered

Times News Services

Unless there is a dramatic change of events, a boycott by Canada of the Summer Olympics in Moscow will mean an end to many dreams.

The next chance at an Olympic medal will not come until 1984 in Los Angeles — provided the Games aren't shifted from that city as a result of the American-led boycott movement. For most of Canada's world-class athletes, that chance will be too late.

Years of training and disrupted education — just to flirt with glory — now appear to have been for nothing.

That feeling of loss and futility was uppermost in the minds of many Canadian athletes in reaction to the federal government's decision to back the boycott.

External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan told the Commons Tuesday Canada will boycott the Summer Olympics in Moscow to protest the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan.

He said the government is convinced — following extensive consultations with western and Third World countries — there now exists enough international support to make the boycott effective.

The Canadian Olympic Association has been asked not to send athletes to the Games and those who decide to go will do so "without the moral or financial support of the government of Canada," MacGuigan said.

Canada, host of the 1976 Summer Games, joins close to 60 other countries which have indicated they will support the boycott movement launched by U.S. President Carter.

In related developments:

— In Bonn, the West German government, saying it "stands by its ally, the United States," recommended today that national Olympics officials boycott the Moscow summer games. Government spokesmen made it clear, however, it was up to sports officials to take the final decision on whether to or not to go to Moscow.

— In Washington, nineteen amateur athletes asked a federal court today to overturn the U.S. Olympic Committee's decision against sending a team to the Summer Olympic Games in Moscow. The athletes, all Olympic hopefuls, said the USOC violated their constitutional rights, an amateur sports law and its own constitution.

— The Canadian Association of University Athletic Directors says it supports the boycott by Canadian officials, athletes and spectators.

— The sole Canadian booking agent for the games, Sears Travel Service, said the fate of scheduled tours to Moscow will depend on a weekend decision by the Canadian Olympic Association. The company's policy, a spokesman said, is to give full refunds, less $100, if the games are cancelled or if the Canadian team does not participate.

— The CBC announced it is dropping plans for radio and television coverage of the Games at a cost to the state-owned corporation of more than $5 million. Cancellation of coverage is based on the government's decision, CBC President Al Johnson said.

However, one prominent athlete — pentathlon star Diane Jones Konihowski of Edmonton who currently is training in New Zealand — said she will try to obtain a visa to enter the Soviet Union and compete as an individual and, if necessary, not return to Canada until after the Games.

"I don't know what the ruling is on it, but I'm going to try to compete as an individual," she said in a

B.C. Fed to help in police dispute

By MIKE HUGHES

The top labor body in the province has agreed to supply the 300 policemen with a negotiator, research assistant and public relations officer in an effort to reach a settlement.

The policemen were talking strike after mediation efforts to reach an agreement with the Greater Victoria Labor Relations Association collapsed last week at the initial meeting.

However, union spokesman Bryan Bailey said today negotiators for the four area police forces felt a strike was not the answer.

He said municipal police forces in B.C. don't have the reserves or the clout that other large unions have to wage an effective strike to back contract demands.

In addition, he said, there hasn't been any real bargaining between the parties and so it seemed premature to consider walking off the job.

Last week the labor federation agreed to have its secretary-treasurer Dave MacIntyre act as chief negotiator, and to make available the services of federation research director Dave Rice and communications director Tom Fawkes.

About 100 policemen turned up at a general membership meeting Tuesday night and voted unanimously in favor of holding off on any strike vote until further efforts are made to reach a negotiated settlement.

Bailey said the policemen, whose representative body the B.C. Federation of Police Officers is not affiliated with the federation, consider themselves fortunate to have the labor body's assistance.

"This is really a crucial year in terms of setting the atmosphere between the GVLRA and ourselves," he said.

"I hope this will get negotiations going again and we can quickly arrive at a collective agreement.

"However, that remains to be seen."

Bailey said MacIntyre hopes to arrange for meetings next week involving mediator Bob Almgren.

IF YOUR DOG POOP IT... PLEASE SCOOP IT!
CHOPPER

UPLANDS student Kannon Russell, 9, reads sign Larry Talarico hopes will curb doggy droppings.

Doggy do in dew sparks doggerel

Oak Bay resident Larry Talarico has taken steps he hopes will stop him stepping in doggy droppings.

Fed up with the numbers of canine calling cards left on his boulevard, he had a custom sign painted and nailed it to the utility pole outside his house at 3531 Plymouth Road.

A man who keeps his lawns and gardens trim and neat, Talarico says he's tired of having to watch his step while gardening and mowing the lawn.

The Talaricos' children and other neighborhood kids kept stepping in the stuff, too.

"We just put that up as sort of a light joke," he said today, hoping that dog owners would get the message.

There are a lot of dogs in the neighborhood, and their manure seems to sprout on Talarico's lawn after their owner's nightly walks with Fido, he added.

"Some of them have quite large dogs," he said with a laugh.

So on Plymouth Road in the Uplands, "if your dog poop it, please scoop it."

He hopes his individual dog defecation control measure may lead to municipal action to enact a poop and scoop bylaw such as West Vancouver adopted last year.

Other major U.S. cities, dog-loving New York included, have also established strict bylaws to handle the messy problem.

Canada turns screw on Iran

OTTAWA (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mark MacGuigan announced today that Canada is expelling one of the two Iranian diplomats in Ottawa and tightening the economic screws to try to speed release of the 50 American hostages in Tehran. (See also earlier story on page 40).

MacGuigan warned that if diplomatic approaches soon to be made to Iran do not free the embassy captives by May 17, there will be further trade sanctions.

Today's measures, announced while MacGuigan was meeting U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance here, continue a ban on military sales and on government-backed export credits for commercial sales to Iran.

The government is also recommending that no Canadian company sign any export or service contracts with the Iranian revolutionary regime.

Oil companies are being told it is inappropriate to buy oil from Iran, although purchases were cut off last fall when the embassy was seized Nov. 4.

Vance was expected to press Ottawa to take a firmer stand on Iran but the timing of MacGuigan's announcement was surprising. He told reporters Tuesday night there would be no statement on stepped up sanctions during Vance's one-day visit.

It followed by one day a decision to support the U.S. sponsored boycott of the Moscow Olympics, announced on the eve of Vance's arrival for private meetings with MacGuigan and Prime Minister Trudeau.

The Canadian line on Iran and Afghanistan has toughened dramatically in the last several days. Only last week Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau publicly resisted opposition calls to match the boycott stand taken by the former Progressive Conservative government before hearing explanations from Vance on latest Middle East developments.

A spokesman at the Iranian embassy said he was not surprised at the government decision; it had been delivered earlier in the day.

"The announcement was made only because of Vance's visit," he said.

Second secretary Mansour Shahneh is to leave for Tehran Friday.

No visas will be granted to Iranian students to enter Canada except for a small number who had already secured provisional approval.

Emphasizing that this country is acting in concert with the Western allies, MacGuigan said "the government will consider implementing further measures in the trade field if diplomatic approaches to be made shortly by Canada and other countries to Iran regarding the hostage situation do not yield satisfactory results by May 17."

Exxon net gushes up 102%

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp., the world's largest oil company, today reported its first-quarter profits surged by nearly 102 per cent from last year's levels to a record $1.925 billion.

The quarterly profit was the biggest ever for any U.S. corporation, eclipsing the previous record — American Telephone and Telegraph Co.'s net income of $1.466 billion in the quarter ended last Aug. 31.

Exxon's revenues in the latest quarter climbed to $27.6 billion from $18.8 billion, and earnings per share rose to $4.40 from $2.16 in last year's first-quarter, when profits were $955 million.

Among other oil firms reporting first-quarter profits today:

— Shell Oil Co., ranked eighth in the U.S., earned $373 million, or $2.42 a share, up 66.5 per cent from $224 million.

— No. 12 Occidental Petroleum Corp. earned $277.9 million, or $3.62 a share, up 236.4 per cent from $82.6 million.

Tuesday, Texaco Pesident John McKinley said his company's operating earnings rose 97.6 per cent in the first quarter "after several years of relatively low earnings" to $600.6 million.

Piano's finale not so grand

Astonished patrons at Vanier Hall watched helplessly as the hall's $40,000 grand piano toppled off the stage into the orchestra pit.

During a violin-cello recital by Paul Meister and Terry Sturge someone pushed the button which controls the orchestra pit level. The pit had been raised to the level of the stage and when the button was pushed it began to descend.

As the pit lowered the piano, partly on stage and partly on the lift, began to list. Musicians frantically tried to move the heavy instrument but it reached the critical inclination and flipped over.

One witness said: "There was a sound like a lot of drums and harps."

Saanich eyes beach riot squads

By
LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Saanich police department is considering training special riot squads to handle wild beach parties like the one at Mount Douglas Park last weekend, Insp. Ted Owens said today.

A special public meeting between police and Mount Douglas area residents will be held at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Saanich council chambers to discuss possible solutions to the beach party problem.

Among the other options are police-dog patrols and designating remote beaches for teenage parties.

But hauling out riot gear is a last resort, as are the dog patrols, in Owens' opinion.

"The last thing I want to see is people having a chunk taken out of them by a dog," Owens said.

He said residents who branded officers cowards after they refused to break up the Mount Douglas party don't realize the police department lacks the manpower to handle this type of incident.

Mayor Mel Couvelier said today the municipality is getting a number of letters and calls from residents concerned about the noisy parties attended by 200 or 300 teenagers.

But the youngsters gather in such large numbers it's difficult for the police to do anything.

"The difficulty is, if we send them down it seems to invite trouble. It seems to make the matter worse," Couvelier said.

A request last year by the police department for more overtime funds to assign 10 or 12 extra officers certain patrols was turned down because the municipality wasn't satisfied the department was using resources properly, he said.

"Their present policy of not having a full crew on weekends is not good management."

The manpower question has been central to delicate negotiations with the police association, said Couvelier, who is chairman of the Saanich police board.

The department wants a special overtime fund of about $30,000 to provide today's markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market was up sharply in moderately active mid-afternoon trading today.

The Toronto Stock Exchange said a cease-trading order issued April 18 in shares of New Kelore Mines Ltd. was rescinded today because the company is now up-to-date on required filings.

Trading in the company's shares, which was halted April 17, resumed at the opening and by 2 p.m. the stock was up two cents to 45 cents.

Trading in shares of Keeprite Inc., which was halted Monday, resumed at 2.15 p.m. but there were no trades. The stock last traded at $13⅞.

The company said the Ontario Securities Commission has approved a proposal for the repurchase of 800,000 of its outstanding common shares at $17 a share.

To satify the commission's concerns about minority shareholders, Keeprite said an offer for 400,000 shares will be made on floor of the TSE in the near future to shareholders other than the Odette Group Ltd., which owns 50.1 per cent of Keeprite's outstanding shares.

Vancouver

Prices were up in heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange. Volume at 11:00 a.m. PST was 1,663,000 shares.

Of the stocks that traded, 143 advanced, 106 declined and 185 remained steady.

B.C. Resources Investment Corp. led trading in the industrials, dropping ⅛ to $6¾ on 37,835 shares and Potter Distillers A gained .05 to $1.35 on 2,000. Grouse Mountain declined .02 to .55 on 2,000 and Renn Industries remained steady at $1.60 on 1,300. Keg Restaurants advanced .05 to $2.05 and Great National Land remained steady at $1.10.

On the resource and development board, Molco Industries was steady at $6.37½ on 34,000 shares and Tintina Silver Mines rose .05 to $4.15 on 32,000. Cobre Explorations gained .14 to $1.30 on 32,000 and Northair Mines Ltd. advanced .15 to $4.55 on 28,100. Arcadia Explorations Ltd. dropped .01 to .50 and Quinstar Oil Corp. was unchanged at $2.20.

Egalite Ventures led traders on the curb exchange, gaining .07 to .48 on 32,500 shares and Gallant Gold Mines declined .05 to $2.15 on 30,950. SJ Resources advanced .01 to .51 on 17,000 and Stanley Resources gained .07 to .96 on 16,500. Lakewood Mining declined .01 to .55 and Logan Mines Ltd. gained .02 to $1.37.

New York

The stock market pushed ahead in active trading today, extending Tuesday's explosive rally after a brief mid-morning pause.

The market's sudden turnaround after a two-month slide was touched off Tuesday by the "buy" recommendation of a leading investment adviser.

New York's Chase Manhattan Bank lowered its prime lending rate to 19 form 19½ per cent. That put the basic charge on blue-chip loans a full percentage point below its peak of 20 per cent earlier this month.

Brokers also noted that little had changed in the economic outlook to ease the recession worries that have been weighing down the market for some time. But those concerns didn't stop prices from continuing their advance.

Occidental Petroleum gained 1 to $23⅞. The company reported first quarter earnings of $3.62 a share, against $1.04 in the like period last year.

London

The Financial Times index rose .1 to 434.4.

Golds and banks advanced.

Pitfield defends $107,800 severance payout

OTTAWA (CP) — Michael Pitfield said Tuesday he received $107,800 in damages and severence pay when he quit as clerk of the Privy Council at the request of former prime minister Joe Clark.

He added in a statement he gave $10,000 of that money back to the government when Prime Minister Trudeau hired him back to his old job nine months later.

Pitfield, a close friend of Trudeau's for many years, said he received 58 weeks' salary as damages and the "usual" termination payment of one week's salary for every year of service.

He had been in the public service for 20 years so his total settlement was 78 weeks' pay.

Pitfield said his $10,000 repayment was voluntary and was made after discussions with Trudeau. He said consideration was given to the fact the compensation was taxable.

He issued his statement after Progressive Conservative MP Tom Cossitt said in the Commons Pitfield received two years' salary — about $150,000 — when he resigned. However, he denied Cossitt's accusation and then issued a statement.

Pitfield was clerk of the Privy Council, the most powerful public servant, for several years under Trudeau. When the Conservatives won the May 22 election last year, he said he would not resign voluntarily.

Clark asked for his resignation and Pitfield tendered it June 4. He later went to Harvard University to teach, but when Trudeau was re-elected Feb. 18, he wasted little time in calling back his old friend. Pitfield resumed his old job March 11.

Pitfield said the one week's severance pay for each year's service is provided for in treasury board regulations.

He said the $107,800 was fully taxable at the highest rate unless transferred to a fund for his retirement 20 to 25 years from now.

He said he offered to repay some of the money to the government voluntarily. "This is an unusual thing to do and I was not under any legal requirement to do so."

The $10,000 was calculated on the basis that he had been away from the public service for about 40 of the 58 weeks he was paid for as damages. It took into account that the compensation came before he paid taxes.

Cossitt (Leeds-Grenville) said in a motion he sought to move in the Commons that Pitfield should repay the compensation he received.

He said Pitfield set up a consulting firm known as N. Michael Pitfield Investments Ltd. and asked the government to clarify whether his interest in the company had been declared under conflict-of-interest guidelines.

Pitfield said he has interest in the company only as a preferred shareholder and all details were disclosed under the government's conflict-of-interest guides before the May election. They would be declared again "when the rearrangement of my affairs in accordance with existing conflict-of-interest guides is completed."

Earlier Pitfield said in an interview Cossitt was "God damn unfair" in making his motion. He said the MP knew his statements were false.

Reports differ on qualities needed by StatsCan chief

OTTAWA (CP) — The main point of disagreement between two consultant reports released Tuesday on Statistics Canada is the main qualification a chief statistician should have.

The reports were tabled in the Commons by Don Johnston, Liberal president of Treasury Board, but were commissioned by his Progressive Conservative predecessor in office, Sinclair Stevens.

The report on the agency's management practices, done by the management consulting firm of Price Waterhouse Associates, insists the chief statistician should primarily be a person "with proven executive management competence."

The second report is on the methods used by the agency to collect and analyse data and was done by an international group of statisticians. They insist the chief statistician "needs effective professional leadership" more than any other qualification.

The reports are two of three commissioned by Stevens after long-standing criticism culminated in an uproar when Boris Celovsky, a senior employee, wote a letter to then chief statistician Peter Kirkham charging the agency with waste and corruption. The letter was leaked to the press Nov. 8.

The two reports tabled Tuesday were announced Dec. 10. But by March, sections of both reports had also been leaked to the press.

On March 14, Johnston gave up and issued a statement summarizing their conclusions.

On April 1, the minister dealt with the third report, an inquiry into Celovsky's allegations conducted by lawyer Peter Newcombe.

He said that report did not support the allegations of waste and corruption, but he didn't intend to table it in the Commons because of the personal references it contained.

Johnston also announced the appointment for two months of Lawrence Fry, deputy minister in supply and services, as acting chief statistician.

Monday, Johnston said Celovsky had been offered and had accepted a new job within Statistics Canada.

Wardair opts for two-class fare system

TORONTO (CP) — Wardair Canada Ltd. announced Tuesday it will have a two-class system on domestic routes beginning June 6. Wardair currently has one class on domestic flights with meals and bar service included in the price of a ticket.

From June 6 to Dec. 12, the round-trip airfare between Toronto and Vancouver will be reduced to $222 a person without meals and bar service and $242 for full meals and drinks. The cost of the flight now is $269.

Hypochondriacs find all the answers here

NEW YORK (UPI) — The first ever Physicians' Desk Reference for Nonprescription Drugs has an answer for every hypochondriac's prayer and provides the means for consumers who want to cut doctor bills by curing themselves.

The book, published Tuesday, appears at a time when some health insurance companies say 50 percent of all visits to doctors may be unnecessary and when many people are turning to the medicine chest instead of the doctor.

The reference pictures and describes more than 650 lotions, potions, pills, ointments, drops and other over-the-counter medicines. It also contains a guide to self-treatment of everything from jock itch and constipation to indigestion and dandruff.

Most of the half-million first printing is for doctors and pharmacists but a portion has been earmarked for regular folks. Physicians and pharmacists get free copies of the reference with its 312 white, yellow, pink, and blue pages. Others must pay $12.25.

Over-the-counter medicines range from aspirin to cough and cold remedies and concoctions for cuts, scrapes and bruises. Today's OTCs are yesterday's patent medicines and, the book warns, must be used with care.

The guide tells those who treat themselves when not to use a product, such as when ingredients conflict with other medications. It also tells what not to do when taking a product — not to drive, for example, when an ingredient makes you drowsy.

More than 100,000 over-the-counter medical products are available and are fast becoming an inflation-fighting way of treating minor problems. Sales of the OTCs hit a record $5.5 billion last year — up $1 billion since 1977.

The book's descriptions of products are strictly in FDA-approved style, listing active ingredients, symptoms intended to treat, recommended dosage, precautions and what to do in case of overdosage.

Corsican bombings in France

PARIS (UPI) — Nine bombs, planted by Corsican nationalists, exploded today at travel agencies, stores and government buildings in Paris and the port of Nice.

Three persons were slightly injured from flying glass at one of the seven explosions in Paris. No one was injured in the two bomb attacks in Nice.

All the attacks were claimed by the Corsican National Liberation Front in telephone calls to the French news media. The Front seeks independence for Corsica, which has been under French rule for 212 years.

Five of the Paris explosions came shortly after midnight in working class neighborhoods. The worst damage was at an Air France ticket office where the injuries occurred.

'Rattling' windmill slowed

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The world's newest and largest windmill has been ordered by the U.S. government to restrict operations because it shakes cups and saucers and rattles windows for miles around.

"It makes what has been described as an annoying swishing noise, a most unexpected phenomenon," the Department of Enregy's Dan Ancona said of the 2,000-kilowatt windmill DOE put into service last year at Boone, N.C. "Noise was one problem that was never foreseen as being significant."

Foreseen or not, the windmill's 200-foot-long rotary blades will no longer turn early in the morning, or night or on weekends, while DOE and its consultants struggle to find out what's making the noise and move to correct it.

"The swish-swish noise is the audible component of the low-frequency sound the blades are generating," Ancona said. "But what the people of Boone are really hearing is their windows and other objects in the homes rattling from the vibrations of this sound."

Elvis' pharmacist suspended

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — An ailing Memphis pharmacist who dispensed nearly 10,000 pills and injections for the late rock 'n' roll king Elvis Presley agreed Tuesday to give up his state licence rather than face a hearing.

Appearing before the state Board of Pharmacy at his request, Irving Jack Kirsch agreed to an order revoking his licence as a pharmacist and the licence of his pharmacy, The Prescription House. The agreement puts him out of business.

It was the maximum penalty available to the Board of Pharmacy.

Kirsch was accused of filling too many prescriptions written by Dr. George Nichopoulos, Presley's personal physician. Among other things, the board said Kirsch "knew, or should have known, that the aforementioned patient, Elvis Presley, had a serious drug problem."

The complaint said Kirsch failed to exercise professional responsibility "not to fill or allow to be filled prescriptions which he knew or should have known were not issued . . . for any legitimate medical purpose."

The state Board of Medical Examiners, which could have revoked Nichopoulos' licence, suspended it on Jan. 19 for 90 days. He resumed practice Monday.

Park reopens after injuries

MONTREAL (CP) — Belmont Park, an amusement park in the city's north-end where three children suffered serious injuries in two separate accidents on rides last summer, is ready to re-open under new management.

Paul Pappas, the park's new director, said his children will be the first this year to try the park's rides, which were all recently overhauled at a cost of $30,000 as part of a $1-million refurbishing program.

Diamond suspect freed

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli police Tuesday released their only suspect in last week's $4-million diamond robbery after he passed a lie-detector test.

Nissim Ashkenazi, 28, was arrested in the Israel Diamond Exchange six hours after a lone bandit armed with a pistol and a hand grenade took several packets of gems from the office of a diamond merchant.

Ashkenazi said he was in the building hanging wallpaper and a police spokesman said the lie detector indicated he was telling the truth. The victimized merchant who had identified the suspect also passed a lie-detector test, she said.

Friday's robbery was the largest in Israel's history.

Bandits heist half a million

INWOOD, N.Y. (AP) — A gang of bandits made off with $500,000 after holding up an armored truck Tuesday that was loading money for transfer from a New York City-area bank, authorities said.

Nassau County police said five men were believed to have taken part in the robbery outside the European-American Bank here. They fled in a station wagon, later found abandoned at a nearby railway station.

The money was being transferred from the bank to a truck belonging to Purolator Security, Inc.

Use This Home Recipe Plan to Lose Ugly Fat

It's simple how quickly one may lose pounds of bulky unsightly fat right in your own home. Use this recipe plan yourself. It's easy — no trouble at all and costs little. Just go to your drug store and ask for four ounces of Naran. Pour this into a pint bottle and add enough grapefruit juice to fill the bottle. Take two tablespoons full twice a day and follow the Naran plan.

If your first purchase does not show you the simple, easy way to lose bulky fat and help regain slender more graceful curves; if reducible pounds and inches of excess fat don't seem to disappear almost like magic from neck, chin, arms, bust, abdomen, hips, calves and ankles just return the empty bottle for your money back. Follow the easy way endorsed by many who have tried this plan and help bring back alluring curves and graceful slenderness. Note how quickly bloat disappears — how much better you feel. More alive, youthful appearing and active.
